How to use this plan

This is the exact 30-day rotation our kitchen cooks — portioned, balanced to your daily targets, and written so you can make every dish at home. A few things that make it work.

- All quantities are raw weights. Grams are measured before cooking — weigh dry rice, uncooked dal and raw vegetables, not the finished dish.
- Hit the daily targets, not every gram. The per-day kcal and protein numbers are what matter. Small swaps are fine as long as the day's totals hold.
- Batch-prep the bases. Soak legumes overnight, pressure-cook dals and grains in bulk, and pre-chop aromatics — most days then take minutes.
- Log what you eat. Mark each meal in your FitFuel dashboard. That's what powers your progress charts and consistency score.
- Use the shop list. The final pages total every ingredient across the whole plan, so one trip covers you.

SECTION 01

The 30-day plan

Every day below is a full menu — breakfast, lunch, dinner and snack — with macros, ingredients and step-by-step method for each dish.

BREAKFAST

Maharashtrian Moong Dal Chilla with Green Chutney & Pomegranate Raita

355 kcal

25g protein

38g carbs

9g fat

10g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 120 g
- Fresh Mint — 10 g
- Cumin Seeds — 1 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the batter: Drain the soaked moong dal thoroughly — excess water makes flat, rubbery chillas. Grind with just enough water (about 3 tbsp) to make a thick, pourable batter the consistency of dosa batter. Add grated ginger, chopped green chilli, half the fresh coriander, cumin seeds, turmeric, and salt. Mix well. The batter should coat the back of a spoon thickly — if it runs off immediately, it is too thin.
2. Make the coriander-mint chutney: Blend remaining coriander, mint leaves, lemon juice, 1g roasted cumin seeds, 1 green chilli, a pinch of salt, and 2 tbsp water until smooth. Taste — it should be bright, sharp, and heavily herbed. If it tastes flat, add more lemon juice, not salt. Transfer to a 30ml sauce pot for packing.
3. Cook the chillas: Heat a cast iron tawa over medium-high heat for 2 full minutes — it must be evenly hot across the surface. Brush lightly with 2g oil using a folded tissue. Pour one ladle of batter (about 80g) and spread in a thin circle using the back of the ladle, moving outward in one confident spiral. Lower heat to medium. Cook undisturbed for 2.5 minutes until the edges lift and look dry — resist moving earlier. The surface will turn from glossy to matte. Drizzle 2g oil around the edges. Flip and cook 60 seconds on the second side until light golden. Repeat for all 4 chillas.
4. Prepare the raita: Whisk low-fat curd until completely smooth — any lumps will look unappetising. Fold in pomegranate arils, a pinch of roasted cumin powder, and a tiny pinch of salt. Do not add water or the raita will be too thin. Transfer to a 60ml pot.
5. Pack and assemble: Place 4 chillas folded in quarters in the main compartment. Raita pot and chutney pot go in separate compartments or in the side of the box. Label: "Open chutney pot first, drizzle over chilla, eat immediately for best texture." Ensure lids are sealed tightly — curd raita leaks easily.

LUNCHChettinad Cauliflower Steak with Black Pepper-Coconut Gravy & Brown Rice

468 kcal

22g protein

63g carbs

12g fat

13g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Gobhi / Cauliflower — 250 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Black Pepper — 5 g
- Cinnamon — 2 g
- Cardamom — 1 g
- Coriander Powder — 4 g
- Groundnut Oil — 12 g
- Curry Leaves — 6 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 160 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 100 g
- Ginger — 10 g
- Fennel Seeds — 3 g
- Cloves — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Ghee — 4 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Prepare and sear the cauliflower steaks: Slice the cauliflower head from crown to stem into 2.5cm steaks — you will get 2 full steaks and some florets from the sides. Season steaks generously with salt and a pinch of turmeric on both sides. Heat cast iron pan over maximum heat for 3 full minutes. Add 8g oil and let it just begin to smoke. Place cauliflower steaks flat-side down — press firmly with a spatula. Cook undisturbed 3-4 minutes until deep golden-brown with caramelised crust. Flip once. Cook 2 minutes on the second side. Remove to a plate.
2. Build the Chettinad spice base: In a heavy-bottomed pot, heat 4g oil over medium heat. Add cinnamon, cloves, cardamom, and fennel seeds — let them sizzle 30 seconds until fragrant. Add sliced onion and cook 6 minutes over medium heat until deeply golden — this takes time and patience. Add crushed garlic and ginger, cook 2 minutes. Add red chilli powder, coriander powder, remaining turmeric, and freshly cracked black pepper. Stir 1 minute over heat until the spices are aromatic and darkened slightly.
3. Make the gravy and braise the steaks: Add chopped tomatoes to the spice base and cook 5 minutes until they collapse and the oil separates at the edges — a visual cue that the masala is ready. Add 150ml water and bring to a simmer. Carefully lower the seared cauliflower steaks into the gravy. Spoon gravy over the top. Cover and braise on low heat 8 minutes. The gravy should thicken and cling to the steaks. Add lemon juice, taste and adjust salt. The gravy should be bold, peppery, and aromatic.
4. Finish the brown rice: Heat a small pan, add ghee and curry leaves — let them crackle 10 seconds. Pour over cooked brown rice and toss to coat. Season lightly with salt. The curry-leaf-ghee rice should be fragrant and each grain separate.
5. Pack and garnish: Spoon brown rice into one compartment. Place cauliflower steak in the main compartment and ladle generous gravy over it. Garnish with fresh coriander.

DINNERNorth Indian Palak Paneer with Jowar Roti*412 kcal28g protein43g carbs14g fat11g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Paneer Low Fat — 150 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Jowar Flour — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 250 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Ghee — 6 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g

METHOD

- 1. Blanch and puree the spinach: Bring a large pot of salted water to a vigorous boil. Drop spinach leaves in — blanch exactly 30 seconds, no more. Drain immediately and transfer to an ice bath (or run cold water) to stop the cooking and preserve the bright green colour. Blend the blanched spinach to a very smooth puree. This step is the difference between a vibrant green palak paneer and a dull army-green one.
- 2. Sear the paneer: Heat 4g ghee in a cast iron pan over high heat until shimmering. Add paneer cubes in a single layer. Sear 90 seconds per side until golden-brown with slightly crispy edges. The sear prevents the paneer from breaking down in the curry. Remove and set aside.
- 3. Build the masala: In the same pan, add oil and reduce heat to medium. Add cumin seeds, let them crackle. Add finely chopped onion and cook 6 minutes until golden. Add garlic, ginger, and green chilli paste — cook 2 minutes. Add blended tomato, turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Cook 5 minutes until oil separates.
- 4. Combine and finish: Add spinach puree to the masala. Stir well on medium heat 3 minutes. Add seared paneer cubes. Simmer 3 minutes. Add garam masala and crushed kasuri methi. Add lemon juice to preserve the green colour. Finish with a swirl of 2g ghee. The palak should be vibrant green, not dull.
- 5. Make jowar roti and pack: Knead jowar flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into a 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 2 min per side. Pack palak paneer in main compartment. Jowar roti wrapped in foil.

SNACKRajasthani Makhana Chaat with Tamarind Chutney & Pomegranate*195 kcal*6g protein*30g carbs*6g fat*10g fibre*INGREDIENTS

- Makhana — 50 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 40 g
- Tamarind — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ghee — 5 g
- Black Pepper — 1 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Mint — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

- 1. Roast the makhana: Heat a kadai over medium heat. Add ghee and let it melt. Add makhana and toss continuously for 5-6 minutes until they are crispy and light — a makhana is ready when you can break one cleanly between your fingers with a distinct snap. They should feel hollow and light. Add cumin seeds to the pan halfway through — they toast in the residual ghee. Remove from heat. Immediately toss with black pepper, amchur, red chilli powder, and salt while hot.
- 2. Make quick tamarind chutney: Combine tamarind extract with jaggery and 2 tbsp water in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce 2 minutes until slightly thickened. Add a pinch of red chilli powder. Cool. The chutney should be tangy-sweet.
- 3. Assemble and pack: Place roasted makhana in a snack box. Top with pomegranate arils and torn mint. Pack tamarind chutney in a 15ml pot on the side — never pre-dress makhana or they go soft immediately. Garnish with fresh coriander.

DAY 21438 kcal · P 81 · C 198 · F 38

BREAKFASTPunjabi Missi Roti with Low-Fat Curd & Raw Onion Salad*370 kcal23g protein48g carbs9g fat9g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 60 g
- Methi Leaves — 30 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 150 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g
- Chickpea Flour — 40 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 30 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Ghee — 5 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Make the missi roti dough: Combine wheat flour and besan in a bowl. Add methi leaves, chopped onion, green chilli, grated ginger, crushed cumin seeds, red chilli powder, turmeric, and salt. Mix dry first. Add water gradually, kneading to a firm, non-sticky dough — firmer than regular roti dough because besan absorbs less water. Rest 10 minutes covered with a damp cloth. The methi will release moisture as it rests; do not add more water after resting.
2. Roll and cook the rotis: Divide dough into 2 equal balls (approx 80g each). Roll out on a lightly floured surface to 6-inch diameter, slightly thicker than regular roti — about 3mm. Heat tawa to medium-high. Cook first side 90 seconds until small brown spots appear underneath. Flip, cook 60 seconds. Flip again onto direct flame for 15 seconds for slight char marks on both sides. Remove immediately. Smear 2.5g ghee on each hot roti. The ghee is non-negotiable — it activates fat-soluble vitamins from the methi.
3. Prepare the onion-cucumber salad: Thinly slice onion and cucumber. Toss with lemon juice, a pinch of salt, and fresh coriander. The salad should be sharp and acidic — increase lemon if it tastes flat. Do not add oil to the salad.
4. Pack for delivery: Wrap each roti individually in foil. Pack curd in a 60ml sealed pot. Salad in a separate compartment. Include a note: "Unwrap roti, tear into pieces, dip in curd and salad."

LUNCH

Kashmiri Haak Saag with Masoor Dal & Roti

482 kcal

29g protein

72g carbs

9g fat

18g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 200 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Garlic — 10 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Mustard Oil — 10 g
- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 120 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Masoor Dal (cooked) — 80 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Cook the masoor dal: In a pressure cooker, combine masoor dal, sliced onion, chopped tomato, half the garlic, turmeric, salt, and 300ml water. Pressure cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural release. Open and mash lightly with the back of a spoon — dal should be thick and creamy, not soupy. If too thick, add hot water to desired consistency.
2. Cook the haak (Kashmiri greens): In a kadai, heat mustard oil to smoking point — remove from heat 30 seconds, return to medium. Add hing (it will sizzle immediately) then cumin seeds. Add remaining garlic and cook 1 minute. Add torn spinach leaves in batches — they will wilt dramatically. Add dry ginger powder, kashmiri red chilli powder, and salt. Cook on medium-high heat 5 minutes, tossing occasionally, until greens are tender and all moisture has evaporated. The greens should look glossy with oil coating each leaf.
3. Finish the dal with tadka: Heat 2g oil in a small tadka pan. Add cumin seeds, let sizzle 20 seconds. Pour over cooked dal. Add lemon juice to dal and stir. Garnish with fresh coriander.
4. Pack: Dal in one compartment, haak saag in second compartment, 2 rotis wrapped in foil on the side.

- Eggplant — 240 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Sesame Seeds — 10 g
- Coriander Powder — 4 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 30 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 4 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Bajra Flour — 70 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

- 1. Make the kanda lasun stuffing: In a bowl, combine: roasted crushed peanuts, roasted sesame seeds, finely chopped onion (raw), minced garlic, red chilli powder, coriander powder, turmeric, garam masala, amchur, jaggery, salt, fresh coriander, and lemon juice. Mix thoroughly — the mixture should be moist enough to pack into the brinjal but not wet. Taste — it should be intensely flavoured: spicy, garlicky, tangy, and slightly sweet from the jaggery.
- 2. Stuff the brinjals: Hold each slit brinjal open gently and pack stuffing into the cavity — use a small spoon to push it deep inside. Pack firmly. The brinjal should look slightly puffed. Seal by pressing the slit closed.
- 3. Cook the bharli vangi: Heat oil in a heavy pot over medium heat. Add mustard seeds and curry leaves — let them pop. Carefully place stuffed brinjals in a single layer. Sear 2 minutes turning gently. Reduce heat to low. Cover with a tight-fitting lid. Cook on low heat 18-20 minutes, turning the brinjals every 5 minutes. The brinjals are ready when completely tender when pierced with a knife and the filling is caramelised. No water is added — they steam in their own juices.
- 4. Make bhakri and pack: Knead bajra flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into thick 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 3 min per side — bajra bhakri takes longer than jowar. Pack 3 stuffed brinjals in main compartment. Bhakri wrapped in foil. Kachumber (diced tomato, cucumber, lemon, coriander) in side compartment.

SNACKGujarati Sprouted Moong Dhokla Bites with Mint Chutney*188 kcal13g protein25g carbs5g fat7g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 3 g
- Fresh Mint — 8 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 40 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Sesame Seeds — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g

METHOD

- 1. Blend the sprouted moong batter: Blend sprouted moong with curd, grated ginger, green chilli, turmeric, salt, and minimal water (the sprouts are already moist) to a smooth batter the consistency of thick buttermilk. It should pour slowly. Rest 5 minutes.
- 2. Steam the dhokla: Grease a shallow steaming tray. Pour batter to 2cm depth. Steam on high heat for 12-14 minutes until a toothpick inserted in the centre comes out clean. Do not open the steamer before 12 minutes — temperature drop causes the dhokla to deflate.
- 3. Temper and cut: Heat oil in a small tadka pan. Add mustard seeds, wait for the pop. Add curry leaves and sesame seeds — 10 seconds. Pour over the steamed dhokla while it is still in the tray. Cut into bite-sized squares (4×4cm).
- 4. Make chutney and pack: Blend coriander, mint, lemon juice, green chilli, and a pinch of salt with minimal water to a bright green chutney. Pack 6-8 dhokla bites in snack box. Chutney in 20ml pot on the side.

DAY 31374 kcal · P 77 · C 189 · F 33

BREAKFASTAndhra-Style Pesarattu with Ginger Chutney & Moong Sprout Salad*345 kcal*23g protein*45g carbs*7g fat*11g fibre*INGREDIENTS

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 90 g
- Green Chilli — 8 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Ginger — 15 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 4 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 50 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ginger — 12 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Tamarind — 10 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 3 g
- Moong Dal (cooked) — 40 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 30 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Grind the pesarattu batter: Drain soaked green moong thoroughly. Transfer to blender with ginger, green chilli, cumin seeds, salt, and approximately 80ml water. Blend to a smooth, flowing batter — slightly coarser than dosa batter is fine and actually preferred. The green colour from the moong skin is correct. Batter should flow easily from the ladle. Adjust water if needed — one tablespoon at a time.
2. Make the ginger-tamarind chutney: In a small pan, heat 4g groundnut oil over medium heat. Add sliced ginger and fry 2 minutes until it begins to colour at the edges. Add tamarind extract, red chilli powder, and salt. Cook 3 minutes until thick and fragrant. Remove from heat. In the same pan (wipe clean), heat remaining oil and add mustard seeds — wait until they pop, then add curry leaves and let them crisp 15 seconds. Pour this tadka over the chutney. The final chutney should be sharp, hot, and deeply gingery.
3. Cook the pesarattu: Heat cast iron tawa to high heat. Brush with 2g oil. Pour one ladle of batter (approximately 90g) and immediately spread outward in a fast, confident spiral using the back of the ladle. Lower heat to medium. Cook 2.5-3 minutes until edges are crisp and surface looks dry and matte — the green colour will deepen to dark olive. No flip needed for pesarattu — it is traditionally cooked one side only. Fold into a half-moon and remove.
4. Assemble the sprout salad: Toss moong sprouts, diced tomato, and finely diced onion with lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Fold in fresh coriander. The salad should be lightly dressed — not soaking. It provides volume, crunch, and additional protein.
5. Final pack: Place 2 pesarattu folded in compartment. Sprout salad in side compartment. Chutney pot sealed separately. Label: "Best within 20 min. Dip in chutney and eat with sprout salad."

LUNCHHyderabadi Bagara Baingan with Jowar Bhakri & Onion Salad

455 kcal

18g protein

58g carbs

16g fat

15g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Eggplant — 200 g
- Sesame Seeds — 20 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Coriander Powder — 4 g
- Groundnut Oil — 12 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 40 g
- Tamarind — 15 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 60 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 4 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Jowar Flour — 80 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

- 1. Dry roast peanuts and sesame: In a dry heavy pan over medium heat, roast peanuts 4 minutes until golden and fragrant. Remove. In the same pan, roast sesame seeds 2 minutes until lightly golden and popping. Remove. Cool completely. Grind together with garlic, ginger, red chilli powder, coriander powder, and 3 tbsp water to a coarse, thick paste. This is the heart of bagara baingan — do not rush the roasting.
- 2. Fry the brinjals: Heat 8g oil in the heavy pot over medium-high heat. Add the slit brinjals and fry 5-6 minutes, turning occasionally, until each side is slightly charred and the brinjal is 70% cooked through — it should yield when pressed but not collapse. Remove and set aside. This partial frying seals the brinjal so it doesn't disintegrate in the gravy.
- 3. Build the gravy: In the same pot, heat remaining 4g oil. Add mustard seeds and cumin seeds, let them pop. Add curry leaves. Add sliced onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add tomato and cook 3 minutes. Add the ground peanut-sesame masala paste and cook 4 minutes, stirring, until the paste darkens slightly and the oil begins to separate. Add tamarind extract, 100ml water, turmeric, and salt. Bring to a simmer.
- 4. Braise and finish: Lower the fried brinjals into the simmering gravy. Spoon gravy over them. Cover and cook on low heat 8 minutes until the brinjals are completely tender and have absorbed the gravy. The final gravy should be thick, rich, and cling to the brinjals. Adjust salt. Garnish with fresh coriander.
- 5. Make jowar bhakri and pack: Knead jowar flour with hot water (jowar needs hot water) into a soft dough. Divide into 2 balls. Pat each into a 5-inch circle on a damp cloth — jowar has no gluten so it cannot be rolled. Cook on tawa 2 min per side. Pack brinjal curry in main compartment, bhakri wrapped in foil, raw onion-lemon salad in side compartment.

DINNERSouth Indian Sambar with Idli & Coconut Chutney*382 kcal22g protein57g carbs7g fat8g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Toor Dal (cooked) — 60 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Eggplant — 60 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Idli (steamed) — 90 g
- Fresh Coriander — 12 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Drumstick — 60 g
- Tamarind — 12 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Fenugreek Seeds — 1 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 20 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Cook the dal: Pressure cook toor dal with tomato, onion, drumstick, eggplant, turmeric, and 350ml water for 3 whistles. Natural pressure release. Mash lightly with a ladle — the dal should be smooth with some vegetable texture remaining. The drumstick should be soft enough to extract pulp by running your teeth along it.
- 2. Add tamarind and simmer: Add tamarind extract, red chilli powder, coriander powder, roasted ground fenugreek seeds, and salt to the cooked dal. Stir well. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a vigorous simmer for 8 minutes. The sambar should reduce slightly and the raw tamarind smell should be gone — it becomes mellow and rounded. Taste: sambar should be sour, slightly spicy, and have the earthy depth from the fenugreek.
- 3. Finish with tadka: Heat oil in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add mustard seeds — wait for loud popping. Add curry leaves (crackle 10 seconds), then hing (sizzles immediately). Pour entire tadka into the simmering sambar. Stir once. The aroma should change dramatically — from sour lentils to vibrant, complex sambar. Garnish with fresh coriander.
- 4. Steam idlis and make chutney: Steam 3 idlis from fermented batter for 12 minutes until a toothpick comes out clean. For chutney: blend roasted peanuts with heavy fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, and salt to a coarse, bright green chutney.
- 5. Pack: Sambar in a 150ml leak-proof compartment. 3 idlis in main compartment. Chutney in a sealed 30ml pot. Pack immediately — idli served cold is a customer complaint waiting to happen.

SNACKMaharashtrian Kala Chana Chaat with Onion & Lemon*192 kcal14g protein29g carbs3g fat9g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Kala Chana — 60 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 40 g
- Ginger — 3 g
- Cumin Seeds — 1 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 20 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Cook kala chana: Drain soaked kala chana. Pressure cook with 300ml water and a pinch of salt for 5-6 whistles until completely tender — press one between fingers, it should crush easily. Drain, reserving the cooking water (rich in iron, can be used as soup base). Cool the chana.
- 2. Toss the chaat: In a bowl, combine cooked kala chana, diced onion, diced tomato (deseeded to prevent excess moisture), green chilli, grated ginger, amchur, roasted cumin powder, red chilli powder, and salt. Toss well. Add lemon juice and toss again. The chaat should be vibrant with every grain coated in the spice mix. Taste — if flat, add more amchur and lemon; if too sharp, balance with a pinch of salt.
- 3. Garnish and pack: Transfer to snack box. Garnish with fresh coriander and pomegranate arils on top. Pack a lemon wedge on the side. The chaat should look colourful and inviting — not brown and dull.

DAY 41400 kcal · P 82 · C 180 · F 38

BREAKFASTRajasthani Dalia Khichdi with Methi Tadka & Lemon*362 kcal18g protein53g carbs9g fat9g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Dalia — 70 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 4 g
- Lemon Juice — 15 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Moong Dal (cooked) — 40 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Oil — 8 g
- Fenugreek Seeds — 2 g
- Methi Leaves — 30 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Dry roast the dalia: In a dry pressure cooker or heavy pot, roast the dalia over medium heat for 2 minutes, stirring continuously, until it smells nutty and a few grains begin to colour. This step is non-negotiable — it stops the khichdi from going gummy and adds a nutty depth. Remove and set aside.
2. Build the base: Heat mustard oil in the pressure cooker until it begins to smoke — remove from heat for 30 seconds, then return to medium heat. This removes the raw pungency of mustard oil. Add cumin seeds and fenugreek seeds and let them sizzle 30 seconds. Add chopped onion and cook 4 minutes until translucent. Add grated ginger and slit green chilli, cook 1 minute. Add tomatoes and cook 3 minutes until soft and the oil begins to show at the edges.
3. Pressure cook: Add roasted dalia, washed moong dal, turmeric, salt, and 600ml water. Stir well. Seal the pressure cooker and cook on high until one whistle, then reduce to low and cook 8 minutes. Turn off heat and allow natural pressure release — approximately 10 minutes. Open to reveal a thick, porridge-like consistency. If too thick, add 50ml hot water and stir.
4. Finish with methi and tadka: Stir in fresh methi leaves into the hot khichdi — they wilt from the heat alone, preserving their nutrients. In a small tadka pan, heat the remaining 2g mustard oil, add curry leaves and let them crisp 10 seconds. Pour over the khichdi. Squeeze fresh lemon juice over the top and stir through.
5. Garnish and pack: Portion into 400g serving bowl. Garnish with fresh coriander. Lemon wedge on the side if not already added. Seal lid tightly — khichdi retains moisture and holds well in transit.

INGREDIENTS

- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 150 g
- Chole / Chickpeas (cooked) — 60 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 70 g
- Gajar / Carrot — 60 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Ghee — 8 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 160 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Methi Leaves — 50 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 100 g
- Broccoli — 60 g
- Garlic — 15 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook everything together: In a pressure cooker, combine: spinach, methi, soaked chana dal, tomato, onion, broccoli, carrot, half the garlic, ginger, green chilli, turmeric, red chilli powder, salt, and 200ml water. Everything goes in raw — this is the beauty of sai bhaji. Seal and pressure cook on high for 4 whistles. Allow natural release 10 minutes. Open and roughly mash with a ladle — the vegetables should be completely soft and the dal dissolved into a thick, green mass. Taste and adjust salt.
2. The essential ghee-garlic tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add cumin seeds — let them crackle 20 seconds. Add remaining garlic (thinly sliced) and fry until golden-brown and crispy — about 90 seconds. The garlic must be properly golden, not pale or it won't have the right flavour. Pour this tadka in its entirety over the sai bhaji. Stir through. The aroma should change immediately — from vegetal to rich and garlicky.
3. Make cucumber raita: Grate cucumber and squeeze out excess water. Whisk curd until smooth. Fold in grated cucumber, lemon juice, and a pinch of salt. Keep chilled.
4. Pack and garnish: Brown rice in one compartment. Sai bhaji with ghee tadka in main compartment. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish sai bhaji with fresh coriander and a squeeze of lemon.

- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Bajra Flour — 80 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 120 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g

- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Garlic — 8 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Make and boil the gatte: Mix besan with 60g curd, 5g mustard oil, 1g cumin seeds, fennel seeds, 1g turmeric, 2g red chilli powder, and salt. Knead into a stiff, non-sticky dough — stiffer than roti dough. Divide into 3 portions. Roll each into a 1.5cm diameter rope. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Drop the ropes in and boil 8-10 minutes until they float and feel firm when pressed. Remove, cool slightly, cut into 3cm pieces (the gatte).
2. Build the yoghurt gravy: Heat mustard oil to smoking in a kadai, remove 30 seconds, return to medium heat. Add cumin seeds and hing — sizzle 20 seconds. Add chopped onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add garlic and ginger, cook 2 minutes. Add tomato and cook 4 minutes until soft. Reduce heat to low. Whisk remaining curd smooth and add slowly while stirring continuously — do not add cold curd over high heat or it will split. Add remaining turmeric, red chilli powder, coriander powder, and salt.
3. Combine and simmer: Add boiled gatte to the yoghurt gravy. Stir gently. Simmer on low heat 8 minutes — the gatte will absorb the gravy and swell slightly. The gravy should cling to each piece and look smooth and golden-orange. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and lemon juice. Garnish with fresh coriander.
4. Make bajra roti and pack: Knead bajra flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat two thick 5-inch circles. Cook on tawa 3 min each side — bajra takes longer than wheat. Pack gatte in main compartment. Bajra rotis wrapped in foil.

- Gajar / Carrot — 50 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Flaxseeds — 8 g
- Black Pepper — 1 g
- Cucumber — 100 g
- Fresh Mint — 3 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the hung curd: Whip hung curd with roasted ground cumin, black pepper, amchur, and salt until completely smooth and airy. Taste — it should be thick, tangy, and well-seasoned. If too thick, add 1 tsp water and whisk again. The consistency should be dip-like — thick enough to coat a vegetable stick without dripping off.
2. Roast flaxseeds: Dry roast flaxseeds in a small pan over medium heat 2-3 minutes until they begin to pop and emit a nutty aroma. Cool. Sprinkle over the hung curd.
3. Pack: Spoon hung curd into the dip compartment of the snack box. Cucumber sticks and carrot sticks in the vegetable compartment. Flaxseeds on top of curd. Garnish with fresh mint leaf.

Gujarati Oats Handvo with Green Chutney

348 kcal

22g protein

43g carbs

10g fat

10g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Oats (dry rolled) — 60 g
- Lauki — 100 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Sesame Seeds — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 15 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g
- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 40 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 4 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the handvo batter: Combine coarsely ground oats with curd and 30ml water. Mix and rest 15 minutes — the oats will absorb the curd and soften. After resting, add grated lauki (squeezed), chopped spinach, minced green chilli, grated ginger, turmeric, red chilli powder, and salt. The batter should be thick and drop from a spoon slowly — not pour.
2. Do the tadka: Heat 4g oil in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add mustard seeds — wait for them to splutter loudly (about 30 seconds). Add curry leaves and let them crackle 10 seconds. Add sesame seeds, toss quickly for 5 seconds. Immediately pour HALF this tadka into the batter and mix through. Reserve the other half for the top.
3. Cook the handvo: Heat a thick-bottomed non-stick pan over medium heat with 4g oil. Pour in batter and spread to a 2cm thick disc — do not make it too thin or it will dry out. Scatter remaining tadka (with sesame) over the top. Cover with a lid and cook on low-medium heat for 12 minutes. The bottom should be deep golden — lift a corner gently at 10 minutes to check. Flip carefully (use a plate to invert, then slide back into pan) and cook uncovered 5 minutes on the second side.
4. Make green chutney and pack: Blend fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, a pinch of salt, and 2 tbsp water until smooth. Pack 2 handvo wedges in main compartment, chutney in a sealed 30ml pot on the side.

- Tamatar / Tomato — 60 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Ghee — 6 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 160 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Sweet Potato — 80 g
- Eggplant — 80 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the dalma: Combine toor dal, sweet potato, drumstick pieces, eggplant, tomato, onion, ginger, turmeric, salt, and 350ml water in a pressure cooker. Cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural pressure release. Open — the dal should be fully cooked and the vegetables tender. The dalma is intentionally thicker than dal fry — vegetables cook within the dal, not separately. Mash lightly if you prefer a creamier consistency, but chunks of sweet potato and brinjal are correct.
2. Finish with Odia tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat until shimmering. Add hing (it sizzles immediately). Add cumin seeds and let them crackle 20 seconds. Add red chilli powder — it blooms in the ghee instantly. Pour entire tadka over the dalma. Do not stir — let the aroma waft upward. Stir just before packing.
3. Make kachumber and pack: Toss finely diced tomato, onion, and cucumber with lemon juice, salt, and fresh coriander. Brown rice in one compartment. Dalma in main compartment. Kachumber in side compartment — keep cold.

- Chole / Chickpeas (cooked) — 90 g

- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Coriander Powder — 5 g

- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

1. Cook the chickpeas: Drain soaked chickpeas. Pressure cook with 500ml water, bay leaves, cinnamon, cloves, and 1 tsp salt for 5-6 whistles until completely tender. Reserve cooking liquid — this is gold for the masala. Discard bay leaves, cinnamon, cloves.
2. Deeply caramelize the onion: Heat oil in a heavy kadai over medium-high heat. Add cumin seeds — crackle 20 seconds. Add finely chopped onion and cook 10-12 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until the onion is deep mahogany brown and reduced to a third of its original volume. This is the foundation — no shortcut replaces this step. Add ginger-garlic paste and cook 3 minutes.
3. Build the masala: Add blended tomato to the caramelised onion. Cook on medium-high heat 8-10 minutes until completely dried out and dark — the oil will separate and pool around the masala. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, coriander powder. Cook 2 minutes. The masala should be very dark red and thick.
4. Combine and finish: Add cooked chickpeas with 100ml of their cooking liquid. Stir well. Simmer 5 minutes. Add amchur, garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and lemon juice. Stir. The chana should be coated in a thick, dark masala — each chickpea visible but cloaked. Taste: bold, slightly tangy from amchur, with depth from the caramelised onion. Garnish with fresh coriander.
5. Pack: Chana in main compartment. Brown rice in second compartment. Raw sliced onion dressed with lemon and salt on the side.

METHOD

1. Make oats idli: Mix finely ground oats into standard fermented idli batter along with curd and a pinch of salt. Batter should be slightly thicker than regular idli batter. Grease idli moulds with a drop of oil. Pour batter into 3 moulds. Steam on high heat 12 minutes until a toothpick inserted comes out clean.
2. Make quick sambar: Pressure cook toor dal with tomato, onion, drumstick, turmeric, and 200ml water for 2 whistles. Add tamarind extract and red chilli powder. Simmer 5 minutes. In a tadka pan, heat oil, add mustard seeds and curry leaves, pour over sambar.

BREAKFASTBengali Cholar Dal Cheela with Kasundi Mustard Dip*358 kcal22g protein46g carbs8g fat11g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Chole / Chickpeas (cooked) — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Mustard Oil — 8 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Ginger — 10 g
- Cardamom — 1 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 10 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Cucumber — 80 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Grind the batter: Drain soaked chana dal and blend with grated ginger, green chilli, cardamom seeds, cumin seeds, turmeric, salt, and 70ml water to a smooth batter. It should be slightly thicker than moong dal batter — chana dal is denser. The batter will be pale yellow with tiny black cardamom specks. Rest 5 minutes before use.
- 2. Make the kasundi-style mustard dip: Grind mustard seeds with 2 tbsp water, green chilli, lemon juice, turmeric, and a pinch of salt to a coarse, pungent paste. Do not over-blend — some texture is correct for kasundi. Taste: it should be aggressively mustardy, sharp, and spicy. Adjust lemon for brightness. Transfer to a 30ml pot.
- 3. Cook the cheelas: Heat cast iron tawa to high, brush with 2g mustard oil (the Bengali flavour is incomplete without mustard oil). Pour one ladle of batter, spread to 6-inch circle. Reduce to medium heat. Cook 2.5 minutes until edges lift and surface is matte. Drizzle 1g oil around the edges. Flip and cook 60 seconds. Cheela should be evenly golden with some brown spots — not pale.
- 4. Pack and serve: Place 4 cheelas folded in the box. Julienned cucumber in side compartment with a squeeze of lemon and pinch of salt. Kasundi pot sealed. Include note: "Dip cheela in kasundi, eat with cucumber strips."

- Ginger — 10 g
- Bay Leaves — 2 g
- Cloves — 1 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 120 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 100 g
- Garlic — 15 g

- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Coriander Powder — 5 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the rajma: Drain soaked rajma. Pressure cook with 500ml fresh water and 1 tsp salt on high for 6-7 whistles. The rajma must be completely tender — press one bean between thumb and index finger; it should crush easily without resistance. Under-cooked rajma makes a poor masala. Allow natural pressure release before opening.
2. Caramelize the onion: Heat oil in a heavy kadai over medium-high heat. Add bay leaves, cinnamon, and cloves — sizzle 30 seconds. Add finely chopped onion and cook 8-10 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until deep golden-brown and caramelised — not just translucent. This step is the foundation of a great rajma masala. Add cumin seeds with the onion if you prefer — they toast in the oil alongside the onion.
3. Build the masala: Add ginger-garlic paste to the caramelised onion and cook 2 minutes until the raw smell disappears. Add blended tomato and cook on medium-high heat 6-8 minutes until the oil separates at the edges and the tomato masala is dark red and thick. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Cook 2 more minutes.
4. Combine and finish: Add pressure-cooked rajma with 100ml of its cooking liquid to the masala. Stir well. Bring to a simmer and cook uncovered 5 minutes — the masala will thicken and coat the beans. Add garam masala and kasuri methi (crushed in your palm). Add lemon juice. Taste and adjust salt. The final rajma should be rich, thick, and coat the back of a spoon. Garnish with fresh coriander.
5. Pack: Rajma in main compartment. 2 rotis wrapped in foil. Raw sliced onion with lemon juice in side compartment.

- Cumin Seeds — 3 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the khichdi: In a pressure cooker, combine rice, toor dal, moong dal, masoor dal, chopped onion, tomato, ginger, green chilli, turmeric, cloves, cinnamon, bay leaf, salt, and 500ml water. Stir well. Pressure cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural pressure release 10 minutes. Open — the khichdi should be a thick, porridge-like consistency with no individual grain or dal visible. Stir vigorously to create a smooth, lump-free texture.
2. The essential ghee-cumin tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat until shimmering and lightly smoking. Add cumin seeds — they should crackle immediately and darkly. Add hing (sizzles). Remove from heat and pour immediately over the khichdi. Do not stir in — let the sizzling ghee pool on top. The customer sees it, smells it, and then stirs it themselves.
3. Make kachumber and pack: Toss diced tomato, cucumber, and fresh coriander with lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Portion khichdi with ghee tadka on top into the main compartment. Kachumber in a sealed side compartment.

- Salt — 2 g
- Ghee — 5 g
- Black Pepper — 1 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Mint — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

1. Roast the makhana: Heat a kadai over medium heat. Add ghee and let it melt. Add makhana and toss continuously for 5-6 minutes until they are crispy and light — a makhana is ready when you can break one cleanly between your fingers with a distinct snap. They should feel hollow and light. Add cumin seeds to the pan halfway through — they toast in the residual ghee. Remove from heat. Immediately toss with black pepper, amchur, red chilli powder, and salt while hot.
2. Make quick tamarind chutney: Combine tamarind extract with jaggery and 2 tbsp water in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce 2 minutes until slightly thickened. Add a pinch of red chilli powder. Cool. The chutney should be tangy-sweet.
3. Assemble and pack: Place roasted makhana in a snack box. Top with pomegranate arils and torn mint. Pack tamarind chutney in a 15ml pot on the side — never pre-dress makhana or they go soft immediately. Garnish with fresh coriander.

- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Curry Leaves — 3 g

- Groundnut Oil — 6 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 20 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g

METHOD

- 1. Knead the ragi dough: Mix ragi flour, finely chopped onion, grated carrot, minced green chilli, chopped curry leaves, fresh coriander, grated ginger, sesame seeds, and salt in a bowl. Add hot water gradually — ragi needs hot water to become pliable, unlike wheat. Start with 80ml hot water and knead with your palm, adding more a tablespoon at a time until a soft, non-sticky dough forms. It will never be as smooth as wheat dough — some roughness is correct.
- 2. Pat the rotis: Divide dough into 3 equal portions. Place one portion on a damp piece of food-grade plastic or banana leaf. Dip fingers in water and pat the dough into a rough 5-inch circle, 3mm thick. The edges will be irregular — that is correct and honest for ragi roti. No rolling pin needed.
- 3. Cook on tawa: Heat cast iron tawa to medium-high. Invert the patted roti onto the tawa — peel away the plastic gently. Cook 90 seconds until the surface is dry and edges begin to lift. Brush 2g oil on top and flip. Cook 2 minutes on the second side, pressing gently with a folded cloth to ensure even contact. The roti is done when both sides have brown spots and it feels firm.
- 4. Make peanut-coriander chutney: Blend roasted peanuts, heavy fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, salt, and 3 tbsp water to a coarse, textured chutney. In a tadka pan: heat 2g oil, add mustard seeds, wait for the pop, add curry leaves. Pour tadka over the chutney. Chutney should be thick, not watery.
- 5. Pack: Wrap 3 rotis individually in foil. Chutney in 40ml sealed pot. Cold curd in 60ml sealed pot — kept chilled until dispatch.

- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Make the kanda lasun masala paste: In a dry pan, roast peanuts and sesame seeds separately until golden. Cool. Blend together with garlic, ginger, red chilli powder, and 3 tbsp water to a coarse paste. This is the kanda lasun (onion-garlic) masala base that gives Maharashtrian usal its unmistakable flavour. The paste should be aromatic and sharp with garlic.
2. Pressure cook the sprouts: Pressure cook the matki sprouts with 200ml water and a pinch of salt for 1 whistle only — the sprouts should be cooked through but still hold their shape with slight bite. Over-cooking makes them mushy. Allow natural pressure release.
3. Build the usal: Heat oil in kadai. Add mustard seeds and cumin seeds — wait for the pop. Add curry leaves. Add finely chopped onion and cook 6 minutes until golden. Add kanda lasun masala paste and cook 3 minutes, stirring continuously, until the paste darkens and the oil separates. Add chopped tomato, coriander powder, turmeric, and garam masala. Cook 4 minutes until the masala is dark and thick.
4. Combine and finish: Add pressure-cooked sprouts and 100ml water. Stir well. Simmer 5 minutes until the masala coats each sprout. The usal should be thick — not soupy. Add lemon juice, taste and adjust salt. The final usal must be bold: spicy, tangy, and garlicky. Garnish with fresh coriander and pomegranate arils.
5. Pack: Usal in main compartment. Whole wheat pav wrapped in foil. Green coriander chutney in 20ml pot. A wedge of lemon on the side.

- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 6 g
- Tamarind — 8 g
- Idli (steamed) — 80 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Cook the kadala: Pressure cook soaked black chickpeas with 400ml water and a pinch of salt for 6-7 whistles — black chickpeas are denser than white and need more cooking time. They should be completely tender: press one between fingers and it should yield with zero resistance. Reserve the dark cooking liquid — it adds colour and depth to the curry.
2. Make the Malabar masala paste: Dry roast peanuts and sesame seeds until golden. Cool. Grind with garlic, ginger, fennel seeds, coriander powder, red chilli powder, turmeric, tamarind extract, and 4 tbsp water to a smooth paste. This is the heart of the Malabar masala — the peanut-sesame-tamarind combination creates the characteristic thick, slightly nutty, sour-spiced base of Malabar coastal cooking.
3. Build the curry: Heat oil in kadai. Add mustard seeds — pop. Add curry leaves (generous amount — let them crackle fully). Add sliced onion and cook 6 minutes golden. Add the masala paste and cook 4 minutes until darkened. Add chopped tomato and cook 4 minutes until oil separates. Add cooked kadala with 150ml of their dark cooking liquid. Stir well. Simmer 8 minutes. Add garam masala and lemon juice. The curry should be thick, dark, and coat the chickpeas.
4. Make cucumber raita and pack: Grate cucumber, squeeze water, fold into whisked low-fat curd with a pinch of salt and cumin. Pack kadala curry in main compartment. Appam or idlis wrapped warm. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish curry with fresh coriander.

- Salt — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 40 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Sesame Seeds — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g

METHOD

1. Blend the sprouted moong batter: Blend sprouted moong with curd, grated ginger, green chilli, turmeric, salt, and minimal water (the sprouts are already moist) to a smooth batter the consistency of thick buttermilk. It should pour slowly. Rest 5 minutes.
2. Steam the dhokla: Grease a shallow steaming tray. Pour batter to 2cm depth. Steam on high heat for 12-14 minutes until a toothpick inserted in the centre comes out clean. Do not open the steamer before 12 minutes — temperature drop causes the dhokla to deflate.
3. Temper and cut: Heat oil in a small tadka pan. Add mustard seeds, wait for the pop. Add curry leaves and sesame seeds — 10 seconds. Pour over the steamed dhokla while it is still in the tray. Cut into bite-sized squares (4×4cm).
4. Make chutney and pack: Blend coriander, mint, lemon juice, green chilli, and a pinch of salt with minimal water to a bright green chutney. Pack 6-8 dhokla bites in snack box. Chutney in 20ml pot on the side.

BREAKFASTMumbaiStreet-Style Oats Poha with Crunchy Peanuts & Lemon*338 kcal14g protein50g carbs10g fat7g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Poha (cooked) — 80 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 25 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Seeds — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 30 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Oats (dry rolled) — 30 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Lemon Juice — 15 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

- 1. Rinse and prep the poha: Place poha in a colander and run cold water over it for 30 seconds, tossing gently with your hand. It should soften but not become mushy — individual flakes should separate. Drain immediately. Do not soak in a bowl of water — the poha will disintegrate. Sprinkle turmeric and a pinch of salt over the drained poha and toss to coat evenly. The colour should be a uniform golden yellow.
- 2. Roast the peanuts: Heat kadai over medium-high heat. Add peanuts without oil and roast 3 minutes, tossing frequently, until the skins begin to blister and crack and you can smell the roasted peanut aroma. Remove and set aside — they will continue to cook from residual heat.
- 3. Build the tadka: Heat oil in the same kadai over medium-high heat. Add mustard seeds — cover partially until they pop loudly (about 30 seconds). Add curry leaves and slit green chillies — stand back, they splutter violently. Add sliced onion and cook 3 minutes until translucent and beginning to colour at the edges.
- 4. Add oats then poha: Add rolled oats to the kadai and stir 1 minute until they absorb the oil and onion flavour. Now add the turmeric-coated poha. Fold gently using a spatula — do not stir aggressively or the poha will break into mush. Cook on medium heat 2 minutes. The poha should be heated through, evenly coated, and each flake separate. Add roasted peanuts and toss once more.
- 5. Finish and pack: Remove from heat. Squeeze lemon juice over the top and fold through. Taste — it should be savoury, slightly tangy, with distinct turmeric warmth and peanut crunch. Portion into box. Top with pomegranate arils and heavy coriander garnish.

INGREDIENTS

- Tofu — 180 g
- Coriander Powder — 5 g
- Cloves — 2 g
- Cardamom — 1 g
- Sesame Seeds — 10 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 100 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Groundnut Oil — 12 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 160 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Kashmiri Red Chilli Powder — 5 g
- Fennel Seeds — 4 g
- Cinnamon — 2 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 20 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 60 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

- 1. Dry roast and grind the xacuti masala: In a dry pan over medium heat, roast together: fennel seeds, cloves, cinnamon, cardamom, peanuts, sesame seeds, and half the onion (roughly chopped). Stir continuously for 5-6 minutes until the onion is slightly charred and the spices are fragrant. Cool. Blend with garlic, ginger, kashmiri red chilli powder, coriander powder, and 4 tbsp water to a smooth, thick paste. This is the xacuti masala.
- 2. Press and sear the tofu: Press tofu between two plates with weight for 30 minutes to remove moisture. Cut into 3cm cubes. Season with a pinch of turmeric and salt. Heat 8g oil in a cast iron pan over high heat until shimmering. Add tofu cubes in a single layer. Sear 2 minutes per side until golden-brown and slightly crispy on the outside. The sear creates a crust that prevents the tofu from going mushy in the gravy.
- 3. Build the gravy: Heat 4g oil in a heavy pot. Add sliced remaining onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add tomatoes and cook 4 minutes. Add the xacuti masala paste and cook 4-5 minutes, stirring constantly, until darkened and oil separates. Add 200ml water, bring to simmer.
- 4. Braise tofu and finish: Add seared tofu to the simmering gravy. Spoon gravy over each piece. Simmer on low heat 8 minutes — the tofu will absorb the xacuti flavours. Add lemon juice, adjust salt. Garnish with fresh coriander. Pack brown rice in one compartment, xacuti in main compartment, kachumber (diced tomato + cucumber + lemon + coriander) in a side compartment.

- Paneer Low Fat — 150 g

- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Jowar Flour — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 250 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g

- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Ghee — 6 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g

METHOD

- 1. Blanch and puree the spinach: Bring a large pot of salted water to a vigorous boil. Drop spinach leaves in — blanch exactly 30 seconds, no more. Drain immediately and transfer to an ice bath (or run cold water) to stop the cooking and preserve the bright green colour. Blend the blanched spinach to a very smooth puree. This step is the difference between a vibrant green palak paneer and a dull army-green one.
- 2. Sear the paneer: Heat 4g ghee in a cast iron pan over high heat until shimmering. Add paneer cubes in a single layer. Sear 90 seconds per side until golden-brown with slightly crispy edges. The sear prevents the paneer from breaking down in the curry. Remove and set aside.
- 3. Build the masala: In the same pan, add oil and reduce heat to medium. Add cumin seeds, let them crackle. Add finely chopped onion and cook 6 minutes until golden. Add garlic, ginger, and green chilli paste — cook 2 minutes. Add blended tomato, turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Cook 5 minutes until oil separates.
- 4. Combine and finish: Add spinach puree to the masala. Stir well on medium heat 3 minutes. Add seared paneer cubes. Simmer 3 minutes. Add garam masala and crushed kasuri methi. Add lemon juice to preserve the green colour. Finish with a swirl of 2g ghee. The palak should be vibrant green, not dull.
- 5. Make jowar roti and pack: Knead jowar flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into a 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 2 min per side. Pack palak paneer in main compartment. Jowar roti wrapped in foil.

SNACKMaharashtrian Kala Chana Chaat with Onion & Lemon*192 kcal14g protein29g carbs3g fat9g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Cook kala chana: Drain soaked kala chana. Pressure cook with 300ml water and a pinch of salt for 5-6 whistles until completely tender — press one between fingers, it should crush easily. Drain, reserving the cooking water (rich in iron, can be used as soup base). Cool the chana.
- 2. Toss the chaat: In a bowl, combine cooked kala chana, diced onion, diced tomato (deseeded to prevent excess moisture), green chilli, grated ginger, amchur, roasted cumin powder, red chilli powder, and salt. Toss well. Add lemon juice and toss again. The chaat should be vibrant with every grain coated in the spice mix. Taste — if flat, add more amchur and lemon; if too sharp, balance with a pinch of salt.
- 3. Garnish and pack: Transfer to snack box. Garnish with fresh coriander and pomegranate arils on top. Pack a lemon wedge on the side. The chaat should look colourful and inviting — not brown and dull.

BREAKFASTMaharashtrian Moong Dal Chilla with Green Chutney & Pomegranate Raita*355 kcal*25g protein*38g carbs*9g fat*10g fibre*INGREDIENTS

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 120 g
- Fresh Mint — 10 g
- Cumin Seeds — 1 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the batter: Drain the soaked moong dal thoroughly — excess water makes flat, rubbery chillas. Grind with just enough water (about 3 tbsp) to make a thick, pourable batter the consistency of dosa batter. Add grated ginger, chopped green chilli, half the fresh coriander, cumin seeds, turmeric, and salt. Mix well. The batter should coat the back of a spoon thickly — if it runs off immediately, it is too thin.
2. Make the coriander-mint chutney: Blend remaining coriander, mint leaves, lemon juice, 1g roasted cumin seeds, 1 green chilli, a pinch of salt, and 2 tbsp water until smooth. Taste — it should be bright, sharp, and heavily herbed. If it tastes flat, add more lemon juice, not salt. Transfer to a 30ml sauce pot for packing.
3. Cook the chillas: Heat a cast iron tawa over medium-high heat for 2 full minutes — it must be evenly hot across the surface. Brush lightly with 2g oil using a folded tissue. Pour one ladle of batter (about 80g) and spread in a thin circle using the back of the ladle, moving outward in one confident spiral. Lower heat to medium. Cook undisturbed for 2.5 minutes until the edges lift and look dry — resist moving earlier. The surface will turn from glossy to matte. Drizzle 2g oil around the edges. Flip and cook 60 seconds on the second side until light golden. Repeat for all 4 chillas.
4. Prepare the raita: Whisk low-fat curd until completely smooth — any lumps will look unappetising. Fold in pomegranate arils, a pinch of roasted cumin powder, and a tiny pinch of salt. Do not add water or the raita will be too thin. Transfer to a 60ml pot.
5. Pack and assemble: Place 4 chillas folded in quarters in the main compartment. Raita pot and chutney pot go in separate compartments or in the side of the box. Label: "Open chutney pot first, drizzle over chilla, eat immediately for best texture." Ensure lids are sealed tightly — curd raita leaks easily.

- Masoor Dal (cooked) — 60 g

- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g

- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Ghee — 8 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the lentils: Drain soaked urad dal and rajma. Add to pressure cooker with 600ml fresh water and a pinch of salt. Cook on high for 8-10 whistles — both urad and rajma must be completely broken down and tender. Natural pressure release. The urad should be releasing starch into the water, making it slightly viscous. Mash lightly with a whisk.
2. Build the tomato base: Heat ghee and oil in a heavy pot. Add finely chopped onion and cook 8 minutes until deeply golden. Add ginger-garlic paste and cook 3 minutes. Add blended tomato puree and cook 8-10 minutes on medium-high heat until the oil separates and the tomato is dark red. Add red chilli powder, coriander powder, and turmeric. Cook 2 more minutes.
3. Combine and simmer: Add pressure-cooked lentils to the tomato base. Stir well — the dal will look lighter at first but will deepen as it simmers. Add 100ml water if needed for consistency. Simmer uncovered on low heat 15 minutes, stirring every 3 minutes, until the dal is very thick and the masala is fully integrated. The dal should coat the back of a spoon thickly. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and a finishing drizzle of 4g ghee. Do not stir the ghee in — let it pool on top.
4. Make raita and pack: Whisk curd smooth. Mix in grated cucumber, lemon juice, roasted crushed cumin, and a pinch of salt. Pack dal in main compartment with ghee on top. Brown rice in side compartment. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish with fresh coriander.

- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Bajra Flour — 70 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

1. Make the kanda lasun stuffing: In a bowl, combine: roasted crushed peanuts, roasted sesame seeds, finely chopped onion (raw), minced garlic, red chilli powder, coriander powder, turmeric, garam masala, amchur, jaggery, salt, fresh coriander, and lemon juice. Mix thoroughly — the mixture should be moist enough to pack into the brinjal but not wet. Taste — it should be intensely flavoured: spicy, garlicky, tangy, and slightly sweet from the jaggery.
2. Stuff the brinjals: Hold each slit brinjal open gently and pack stuffing into the cavity — use a small spoon to push it deep inside. Pack firmly. The brinjal should look slightly puffed. Seal by pressing the slit closed.
3. Cook the bharli vangi: Heat oil in a heavy pot over medium heat. Add mustard seeds and curry leaves — let them pop. Carefully place stuffed brinjals in a single layer. Sear 2 minutes turning gently. Reduce heat to low. Cover with a tight-fitting lid. Cook on low heat 18-20 minutes, turning the brinjals every 5 minutes. The brinjals are ready when completely tender when pierced with a knife and the filling is caramelised. No water is added — they steam in their own juices.
4. Make bhakri and pack: Knead bajra flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into thick 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 3 min per side — bajra bhakri takes longer than jowar. Pack 3 stuffed brinjals in main compartment. Bhakri wrapped in foil. Kachumber (diced tomato, cucumber, lemon, coriander) in side compartment.

METHOD

1. Prepare the hung curd: Whip hung curd with roasted ground cumin, black pepper, amchur, and salt until completely smooth and airy. Taste — it should be thick, tangy, and well-seasoned. If too thick, add 1 tsp water and whisk again. The consistency should be dip-like — thick enough to coat a vegetable stick without dripping off.
2. Roast flaxseeds: Dry roast flaxseeds in a small pan over medium heat 2-3 minutes until they begin to pop and emit a nutty aroma. Cool. Sprinkle over the hung curd.
3. Pack: Spoon hung curd into the dip compartment of the snack box. Cucumber sticks and carrot sticks in the vegetable compartment. Flaxseeds on top of curd. Garnish with fresh mint leaf.

Punjabi Missi Roti with Low-Fat Curd & Raw Onion Salad

370 kcal

23g protein

48g carbs

9g fat

9g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 60 g
- Methi Leaves — 30 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 150 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g
- Chickpea Flour — 40 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 30 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Ghee — 5 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Make the missi roti dough: Combine wheat flour and besan in a bowl. Add methi leaves, chopped onion, green chilli, grated ginger, crushed cumin seeds, red chilli powder, turmeric, and salt. Mix dry first. Add water gradually, kneading to a firm, non-sticky dough — firmer than regular roti dough because besan absorbs less water. Rest 10 minutes covered with a damp cloth. The methi will release moisture as it rests; do not add more water after resting.
2. Roll and cook the rotis: Divide dough into 2 equal balls (approx 80g each). Roll out on a lightly floured surface to 6-inch diameter, slightly thicker than regular roti — about 3mm. Heat tawa to medium-high. Cook first side 90 seconds until small brown spots appear underneath. Flip, cook 60 seconds. Flip again onto direct flame for 15 seconds for slight char marks on both sides. Remove immediately. Smear 2.5g ghee on each hot roti. The ghee is non-negotiable — it activates fat-soluble vitamins from the methi.
3. Prepare the onion-cucumber salad: Thinly slice onion and cucumber. Toss with lemon juice, a pinch of salt, and fresh coriander. The salad should be sharp and acidic — increase lemon if it tastes flat. Do not add oil to the salad.
4. Pack for delivery: Wrap each roti individually in foil. Pack curd in a 60ml sealed pot. Salad in a separate compartment. Include a note: "Unwrap roti, tear into pieces, dip in curd and salad."

INGREDIENTS

- Paneer (full fat) — 180 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 100 g

- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 1 g
- Black Pepper — 2 g
- Salt — 3 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Capsicum — 60 g

- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Capsicum — 50 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

- 1. Sauté the aromatics: Heat oil in a kadai over medium-high heat. Add finely diced onion and cook 4 minutes until soft and beginning to colour. Add minced garlic, grated ginger, and green chilli — cook 2 minutes. Add diced capsicum and toss 2 minutes until slightly softened but still with crunch. Add diced tomato and cook 3 minutes until soft and most moisture is gone. The base should be dry — paneer bhurji with a wet base goes soggy and watery.
- 2. Add spices and bloom: Reduce heat to medium. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Stir continuously for 60 seconds until the spices are fragrant and darken slightly. The spices must be bloomed in the oil — adding them after the paneer produces a raw, gritty spice flavour.
- 3. Add paneer and scramble: Add crumbled paneer to the masala base. Fold gently using a spatula — do not stir aggressively or the paneer becomes paste. Cook on medium heat 3 minutes, folding every minute, until the paneer is coated in the masala and heated through. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, freshly cracked black pepper, and lemon juice. Fold once more. The bhurji should look like golden scrambled eggs with red and green flecks. Taste — bold, slightly tangy, peppery.
- 4. Pack with brown rice and salad: Pack paneer bhurji in main compartment. Brown rice in second compartment. Julienned raw capsicum and sliced cucumber tossed with lemon juice and a pinch of salt in side compartment. Garnish bhurji with fresh coriander.

- Fenugreek Seeds — 1 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 20 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Cook the dal: Pressure cook toor dal with tomato, onion, drumstick, eggplant, turmeric, and 350ml water for 3 whistles. Natural pressure release. Mash lightly with a ladle — the dal should be smooth with some vegetable texture remaining. The drumstick should be soft enough to extract pulp by running your teeth along it.
- 2. Add tamarind and simmer: Add tamarind extract, red chilli powder, coriander powder, roasted ground fenugreek seeds, and salt to the cooked dal. Stir well. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a vigorous simmer for 8 minutes. The sambar should reduce slightly and the raw tamarind smell should be gone — it becomes mellow and rounded. Taste: sambar should be sour, slightly spicy, and have the earthy depth from the fenugreek.
- 3. Finish with tadka: Heat oil in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add mustard seeds — wait for loud popping. Add curry leaves (crackle 10 seconds), then hing (sizzles immediately). Pour entire tadka into the simmering sambar. Stir once. The aroma should change dramatically — from sour lentils to vibrant, complex sambar. Garnish with fresh coriander.
- 4. Steam idlis and make chutney: Steam 3 idlis from fermented batter for 12 minutes until a toothpick comes out clean. For chutney: blend roasted peanuts with heavy fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, and salt to a coarse, bright green chutney.
- 5. Pack: Sambar in a 150ml leak-proof compartment. 3 idlis in main compartment. Chutney in a sealed 30ml pot. Pack immediately — idli served cold is a customer complaint waiting to happen.

BREAKFASTAndhra-Style Pesarattu with Ginger Chutney & Moong Sprout Salad*345 kcal*23g protein*45g carbs*7g fat*11g fibre*INGREDIENTS

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 90 g
- Green Chilli — 8 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Ginger — 15 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 4 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 50 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ginger — 12 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Tamarind — 10 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 3 g
- Moong Dal (cooked) — 40 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 30 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Grind the pesarattu batter: Drain soaked green moong thoroughly. Transfer to blender with ginger, green chilli, cumin seeds, salt, and approximately 80ml water. Blend to a smooth, flowing batter — slightly coarser than dosa batter is fine and actually preferred. The green colour from the moong skin is correct. Batter should flow easily from the ladle. Adjust water if needed — one tablespoon at a time.
2. Make the ginger-tamarind chutney: In a small pan, heat 4g groundnut oil over medium heat. Add sliced ginger and fry 2 minutes until it begins to colour at the edges. Add tamarind extract, red chilli powder, and salt. Cook 3 minutes until thick and fragrant. Remove from heat. In the same pan (wipe clean), heat remaining oil and add mustard seeds — wait until they pop, then add curry leaves and let them crisp 15 seconds. Pour this tadka over the chutney. The final chutney should be sharp, hot, and deeply gingery.
3. Cook the pesarattu: Heat cast iron tawa to high heat. Brush with 2g oil. Pour one ladle of batter (approximately 90g) and immediately spread outward in a fast, confident spiral using the back of the ladle. Lower heat to medium. Cook 2.5-3 minutes until edges are crisp and surface looks dry and matte — the green colour will deepen to dark olive. No flip needed for pesarattu — it is traditionally cooked one side only. Fold into a half-moon and remove.
4. Assemble the sprout salad: Toss moong sprouts, diced tomato, and finely diced onion with lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Fold in fresh coriander. The salad should be lightly dressed — not soaking. It provides volume, crunch, and additional protein.
5. Final pack: Place 2 pesarattu folded in compartment. Sprout salad in side compartment. Chutney pot sealed separately. Label: "Best within 20 min. Dip in chutney and eat with sprout salad."

- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 160 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 100 g
- Ginger — 10 g
- Fennel Seeds — 3 g
- Cloves — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Ghee — 4 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Prepare and sear the cauliflower steaks: Slice the cauliflower head from crown to stem into 2.5cm steaks — you will get 2 full steaks and some florets from the sides. Season steaks generously with salt and a pinch of turmeric on both sides. Heat cast iron pan over maximum heat for 3 full minutes. Add 8g oil and let it just begin to smoke. Place cauliflower steaks flat-side down — press firmly with a spatula. Cook undisturbed 3-4 minutes until deep golden-brown with caramelised crust. Flip once. Cook 2 minutes on the second side. Remove to a plate.
2. Build the Chettinad spice base: In a heavy-bottomed pot, heat 4g oil over medium heat. Add cinnamon, cloves, cardamom, and fennel seeds — let them sizzle 30 seconds until fragrant. Add sliced onion and cook 6 minutes over medium heat until deeply golden — this takes time and patience. Add crushed garlic and ginger, cook 2 minutes. Add red chilli powder, coriander powder, remaining turmeric, and freshly cracked black pepper. Stir 1 minute over heat until the spices are aromatic and darkened slightly.
3. Make the gravy and braise the steaks: Add chopped tomatoes to the spice base and cook 5 minutes until they collapse and the oil separates at the edges — a visual cue that the masala is ready. Add 150ml water and bring to a simmer. Carefully lower the seared cauliflower steaks into the gravy. Spoon gravy over the top. Cover and braise on low heat 8 minutes. The gravy should thicken and cling to the steaks. Add lemon juice, taste and adjust salt. The gravy should be bold, peppery, and aromatic.
4. Finish the brown rice: Heat a small pan, add ghee and curry leaves — let them crackle 10 seconds. Pour over cooked brown rice and toss to coat. Season lightly with salt. The curry-leaf-ghee rice should be fragrant and each grain separate.
5. Pack and garnish: Spoon brown rice into one compartment. Place cauliflower steak in the main compartment and ladle generous gravy over it. Garnish with fresh coriander.

INGREDIENTS

- Chickpea Flour — 90 g
- Mustard Oil — 10 g
- Fennel Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 4 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Bajra Flour — 80 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 120 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g

- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Garlic — 8 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Make and boil the gatte: Mix besan with 60g curd, 5g mustard oil, 1g cumin seeds, fennel seeds, 1g turmeric, 2g red chilli powder, and salt. Knead into a stiff, non-sticky dough — stiffer than roti dough. Divide into 3 portions. Roll each into a 1.5cm diameter rope. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Drop the ropes in and boil 8-10 minutes until they float and feel firm when pressed. Remove, cool slightly, cut into 3cm pieces (the gatte).
2. Build the yoghurt gravy: Heat mustard oil to smoking in a kadai, remove 30 seconds, return to medium heat. Add cumin seeds and hing — sizzle 20 seconds. Add chopped onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add garlic and ginger, cook 2 minutes. Add tomato and cook 4 minutes until soft. Reduce heat to low. Whisk remaining curd smooth and add slowly while stirring continuously — do not add cold curd over high heat or it will split. Add remaining turmeric, red chilli powder, coriander powder, and salt.
3. Combine and simmer: Add boiled gatte to the yoghurt gravy. Stir gently. Simmer on low heat 8 minutes — the gatte will absorb the gravy and swell slightly. The gravy should cling to each piece and look smooth and golden-orange. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and lemon juice. Garnish with fresh coriander.
4. Make bajra roti and pack: Knead bajra flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat two thick 5-inch circles. Cook on tawa 3 min each side — bajra takes longer than wheat. Pack gatte in main compartment. Bajra rotis wrapped in foil.

INGREDIENTS

- Makhana — 50 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 40 g
- Tamarind — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ghee — 5 g
- Black Pepper — 1 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Mint — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

1. Roast the makhana: Heat a kadai over medium heat. Add ghee and let it melt. Add makhana and toss continuously for 5-6 minutes until they are crispy and light — a makhana is ready when you can break one cleanly between your fingers with a distinct snap. They should feel hollow and light. Add cumin seeds to the pan halfway through — they toast in the residual ghee. Remove from heat. Immediately toss with black pepper, amchur, red chilli powder, and salt while hot.
2. Make quick tamarind chutney: Combine tamarind extract with jaggery and 2 tbsp water in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce 2 minutes until slightly thickened. Add a pinch of red chilli powder. Cool. The chutney should be tangy-sweet.
3. Assemble and pack: Place roasted makhana in a snack box. Top with pomegranate arils and torn mint. Pack tamarind chutney in a 15ml pot on the side — never pre-dress makhana or they go soft immediately. Garnish with fresh coriander.

Rajasthani Dalia Khichdi with Methi Tadka & Lemon

362 kcal

18g protein

53g carbs

9g fat

9g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Dalia — 70 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 4 g
- Lemon Juice — 15 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Moong Dal (cooked) — 40 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Oil — 8 g
- Fenugreek Seeds — 2 g
- Methi Leaves — 30 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Dry roast the dalia: In a dry pressure cooker or heavy pot, roast the dalia over medium heat for 2 minutes, stirring continuously, until it smells nutty and a few grains begin to colour. This step is non-negotiable — it stops the khichdi from going gummy and adds a nutty depth. Remove and set aside.
2. Build the base: Heat mustard oil in the pressure cooker until it begins to smoke — remove from heat for 30 seconds, then return to medium heat. This removes the raw pungency of mustard oil. Add cumin seeds and fenugreek seeds and let them sizzle 30 seconds. Add chopped onion and cook 4 minutes until translucent. Add grated ginger and slit green chilli, cook 1 minute. Add tomatoes and cook 3 minutes until soft and the oil begins to show at the edges.
3. Pressure cook: Add roasted dalia, washed moong dal, turmeric, salt, and 600ml water. Stir well. Seal the pressure cooker and cook on high until one whistle, then reduce to low and cook 8 minutes. Turn off heat and allow natural pressure release — approximately 10 minutes. Open to reveal a thick, porridge-like consistency. If too thick, add 50ml hot water and stir.
4. Finish with methi and tadka: Stir in fresh methi leaves into the hot khichdi — they wilt from the heat alone, preserving their nutrients. In a small tadka pan, heat the remaining 2g mustard oil, add curry leaves and let them crisp 10 seconds. Pour over the khichdi. Squeeze fresh lemon juice over the top and stir through.
5. Garnish and pack: Portion into 400g serving bowl. Garnish with fresh coriander. Lemon wedge on the side if not already added. Seal lid tightly — khichdi retains moisture and holds well in transit.

Kashmiri Haak Saag with Masoor Dal & Roti

INGREDIENTS

- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 200 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Garlic — 10 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Mustard Oil — 10 g
- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 120 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Masoor Dal (cooked) — 80 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Cook the masoor dal: In a pressure cooker, combine masoor dal, sliced onion, chopped tomato, half the garlic, turmeric, salt, and 300ml water. Pressure cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural release. Open and mash lightly with the back of a spoon — dal should be thick and creamy, not soupy. If too thick, add hot water to desired consistency.
2. Cook the haak (Kashmiri greens): In a kadai, heat mustard oil to smoking point — remove from heat 30 seconds, return to medium. Add hing (it will sizzle immediately) then cumin seeds. Add remaining garlic and cook 1 minute. Add torn spinach leaves in batches — they will wilt dramatically. Add dry ginger powder, kashmiri red chilli powder, and salt. Cook on medium-high heat 5 minutes, tossing occasionally, until greens are tender and all moisture has evaporated. The greens should look glossy with oil coating each leaf.
3. Finish the dal with tadka: Heat 2g oil in a small tadka pan. Add cumin seeds, let sizzle 20 seconds. Pour over cooked dal. Add lemon juice to dal and stir. Garnish with fresh coriander.
4. Pack: Dal in one compartment, haak saag in second compartment, 2 rotis wrapped in foil on the side.

- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

1. Cook the chickpeas: Drain soaked chickpeas. Pressure cook with 500ml water, bay leaves, cinnamon, cloves, and 1 tsp salt for 5-6 whistles until completely tender. Reserve cooking liquid — this is gold for the masala. Discard bay leaves, cinnamon, cloves.
2. Deeply caramelize the onion: Heat oil in a heavy kadai over medium-high heat. Add cumin seeds — crackle 20 seconds. Add finely chopped onion and cook 10-12 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until the onion is deep mahogany brown and reduced to a third of its original volume. This is the foundation — no shortcut replaces this step. Add ginger-garlic paste and cook 3 minutes.
3. Build the masala: Add blended tomato to the caramelised onion. Cook on medium-high heat 8-10 minutes until completely dried out and dark — the oil will separate and pool around the masala. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, coriander powder. Cook 2 minutes. The masala should be very dark red and thick.
4. Combine and finish: Add cooked chickpeas with 100ml of their cooking liquid. Stir well. Simmer 5 minutes. Add amchur, garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and lemon juice. Stir. The chana should be coated in a thick, dark masala — each chickpea visible but cloaked. Taste: bold, slightly tangy from amchur, with depth from the caramelised onion. Garnish with fresh coriander.
5. Pack: Chana in main compartment. Brown rice in second compartment. Raw sliced onion dressed with lemon and salt on the side.

- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 40 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Sesame Seeds — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g

METHOD

- 1. Blend the sprouted moong batter: Blend sprouted moong with curd, grated ginger, green chilli, turmeric, salt, and minimal water (the sprouts are already moist) to a smooth batter the consistency of thick buttermilk. It should pour slowly. Rest 5 minutes.
- 2. Steam the dhokla: Grease a shallow steaming tray. Pour batter to 2cm depth. Steam on high heat for 12-14 minutes until a toothpick inserted in the centre comes out clean. Do not open the steamer before 12 minutes — temperature drop causes the dhokla to deflate.
- 3. Temper and cut: Heat oil in a small tadka pan. Add mustard seeds, wait for the pop. Add curry leaves and sesame seeds — 10 seconds. Pour over the steamed dhokla while it is still in the tray. Cut into bite-sized squares (4×4cm).
- 4. Make chutney and pack: Blend coriander, mint, lemon juice, green chilli, and a pinch of salt with minimal water to a bright green chutney. Pack 6-8 dhokla bites in snack box. Chutney in 20ml pot on the side.

BREAKFASTGujarati Oats Handvo with Green Chutney*348 kcal22g protein43g carbs10g fat10g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Oats (dry rolled) — 60 g
- Lauki — 100 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Sesame Seeds — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 15 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g
- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 40 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 4 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the handvo batter: Combine coarsely ground oats with curd and 30ml water. Mix and rest 15 minutes — the oats will absorb the curd and soften. After resting, add grated lauki (squeezed), chopped spinach, minced green chilli, grated ginger, turmeric, red chilli powder, and salt. The batter should be thick and drop from a spoon slowly — not pour.
2. Do the tadka: Heat 4g oil in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add mustard seeds — wait for them to splutter loudly (about 30 seconds). Add curry leaves and let them crackle 10 seconds. Add sesame seeds, toss quickly for 5 seconds. Immediately pour HALF this tadka into the batter and mix through. Reserve the other half for the top.
3. Cook the handvo: Heat a thick-bottomed non-stick pan over medium heat with 4g oil. Pour in batter and spread to a 2cm thick disc — do not make it too thin or it will dry out. Scatter remaining tadka (with sesame) over the top. Cover with a lid and cook on low-medium heat for 12 minutes. The bottom should be deep golden — lift a corner gently at 10 minutes to check. Flip carefully (use a plate to invert, then slide back into pan) and cook uncovered 5 minutes on the second side.
4. Make green chutney and pack: Blend fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, a pinch of salt, and 2 tbsp water until smooth. Pack 2 handvo wedges in main compartment, chutney in a sealed 30ml pot on the side.

INGREDIENTS

- Eggplant — 200 g
- Sesame Seeds — 20 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Coriander Powder — 4 g
- Groundnut Oil — 12 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 40 g
- Tamarind — 15 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 60 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 4 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Jowar Flour — 80 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

- 1. Dry roast peanuts and sesame: In a dry heavy pan over medium heat, roast peanuts 4 minutes until golden and fragrant. Remove. In the same pan, roast sesame seeds 2 minutes until lightly golden and popping. Remove. Cool completely. Grind together with garlic, ginger, red chilli powder, coriander powder, and 3 tbsp water to a coarse, thick paste. This is the heart of bagara baingan — do not rush the roasting.
- 2. Fry the brinjals: Heat 8g oil in the heavy pot over medium-high heat. Add the slit brinjals and fry 5-6 minutes, turning occasionally, until each side is slightly charred and the brinjal is 70% cooked through — it should yield when pressed but not collapse. Remove and set aside. This partial frying seals the brinjal so it doesn't disintegrate in the gravy.
- 3. Build the gravy: In the same pot, heat remaining 4g oil. Add mustard seeds and cumin seeds, let them pop. Add curry leaves. Add sliced onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add tomato and cook 3 minutes. Add the ground peanut-sesame masala paste and cook 4 minutes, stirring, until the paste darkens slightly and the oil begins to separate. Add tamarind extract, 100ml water, turmeric, and salt. Bring to a simmer.
- 4. Braise and finish: Lower the fried brinjals into the simmering gravy. Spoon gravy over them. Cover and cook on low heat 8 minutes until the brinjals are completely tender and have absorbed the gravy. The final gravy should be thick, rich, and cling to the brinjals. Adjust salt. Garnish with fresh coriander.
- 5. Make jowar bhakri and pack: Knead jowar flour with hot water (jowar needs hot water) into a soft dough. Divide into 2 balls. Pat each into a 5-inch circle on a damp cloth — jowar has no gluten so it cannot be rolled. Cook on tawa 2 min per side. Pack brinjal curry in main compartment, bhakri wrapped in foil, raw onion-lemon salad in side compartment.

- Bay Leaves — 1 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the khichdi: In a pressure cooker, combine rice, toor dal, moong dal, masoor dal, chopped onion, tomato, ginger, green chilli, turmeric, cloves, cinnamon, bay leaf, salt, and 500ml water. Stir well. Pressure cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural pressure release 10 minutes. Open — the khichdi should be a thick, porridge-like consistency with no individual grain or dal visible. Stir vigorously to create a smooth, lump-free texture.
2. The essential ghee-cumin tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat until shimmering and lightly smoking. Add cumin seeds — they should crackle immediately and darkly. Add hing (sizzles). Remove from heat and pour immediately over the khichdi. Do not stir in — let the sizzling ghee pool on top. The customer sees it, smells it, and then stirs it themselves.
3. Make kachumber and pack: Toss diced tomato, cucumber, and fresh coriander with lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Portion khichdi with ghee tadka on top into the main compartment. Kachumber in a sealed side compartment.

METHOD

1. Cook kala chana: Drain soaked kala chana. Pressure cook with 300ml water and a pinch of salt for 5-6 whistles until completely tender — press one between fingers, it should crush easily. Drain, reserving the cooking water (rich in iron, can be used as soup base). Cool the chana.
2. Toss the chaat: In a bowl, combine cooked kala chana, diced onion, diced tomato (deseeded to prevent excess moisture), green chilli, grated ginger, amchur, roasted cumin powder, red chilli powder, and salt. Toss well. Add lemon juice and toss again. The chaat should be vibrant with every grain coated in the spice mix. Taste — if flat, add more amchur and lemon; if too sharp, balance with a pinch of salt.

- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Ginger — 10 g
- Cardamom — 1 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 10 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Cucumber — 80 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Grind the batter: Drain soaked chana dal and blend with grated ginger, green chilli, cardamom seeds, cumin seeds, turmeric, salt, and 70ml water to a smooth batter. It should be slightly thicker than moong dal batter — chana dal is denser. The batter will be pale yellow with tiny black cardamom specks. Rest 5 minutes before use.
- 2. Make the kasundi-style mustard dip: Grind mustard seeds with 2 tbsp water, green chilli, lemon juice, turmeric, and a pinch of salt to a coarse, pungent paste. Do not over-blend — some texture is correct for kasundi. Taste: it should be aggressively mustardy, sharp, and spicy. Adjust lemon for brightness. Transfer to a 30ml pot.
- 3. Cook the cheelas: Heat cast iron tawa to high, brush with 2g mustard oil (the Bengali flavour is incomplete without mustard oil). Pour one ladle of batter, spread to 6-inch circle. Reduce to medium heat. Cook 2.5 minutes until edges lift and surface is matte. Drizzle 1g oil around the edges. Flip and cook 60 seconds. Cheela should be evenly golden with some brown spots — not pale.
- 4. Pack and serve: Place 4 cheelas folded in the box. Julienned cucumber in side compartment with a squeeze of lemon and pinch of salt. Kasundi pot sealed. Include note: "Dip cheela in kasundi, eat with cucumber strips."

- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook everything together: In a pressure cooker, combine: spinach, methi, soaked chana dal, tomato, onion, broccoli, carrot, half the garlic, ginger, green chilli, turmeric, red chilli powder, salt, and 200ml water. Everything goes in raw — this is the beauty of sai bhaji. Seal and pressure cook on high for 4 whistles. Allow natural release 10 minutes. Open and roughly mash with a ladle — the vegetables should be completely soft and the dal dissolved into a thick, green mass. Taste and adjust salt.
2. The essential ghee-garlic tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add cumin seeds — let them crackle 20 seconds. Add remaining garlic (thinly sliced) and fry until golden-brown and crispy — about 90 seconds. The garlic must be properly golden, not pale or it won't have the right flavour. Pour this tadka in its entirety over the sai bhaji. Stir through. The aroma should change immediately — from vegetal to rich and garlicky.
3. Make cucumber raita: Grate cucumber and squeeze out excess water. Whisk curd until smooth. Fold in grated cucumber, lemon juice, and a pinch of salt. Keep chilled.
4. Pack and garnish: Brown rice in one compartment. Sai bhaji with ghee tadka in main compartment. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish sai bhaji with fresh coriander and a squeeze of lemon.

- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 6 g
- Tamarind — 8 g
- Idli (steamed) — 80 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Cook the kadala: Pressure cook soaked black chickpeas with 400ml water and a pinch of salt for 6-7 whistles — black chickpeas are denser than white and need more cooking time. They should be completely tender: press one between fingers and it should yield with zero resistance. Reserve the dark cooking liquid — it adds colour and depth to the curry.
2. Make the Malabar masala paste: Dry roast peanuts and sesame seeds until golden. Cool. Grind with garlic, ginger, fennel seeds, coriander powder, red chilli powder, turmeric, tamarind extract, and 4 tbsp water to a smooth paste. This is the heart of the Malabar masala — the peanut-sesame-tamarind combination creates the characteristic thick, slightly nutty, sour-spiced base of Malabar coastal cooking.
3. Build the curry: Heat oil in kadai. Add mustard seeds — pop. Add curry leaves (generous amount — let them crackle fully). Add sliced onion and cook 6 minutes golden. Add the masala paste and cook 4 minutes until darkened. Add chopped tomato and cook 4 minutes until oil separates. Add cooked kadala with 150ml of their dark cooking liquid. Stir well. Simmer 8 minutes. Add garam masala and lemon juice. The curry should be thick, dark, and coat the chickpeas.
4. Make cucumber raita and pack: Grate cucumber, squeeze water, fold into whisked low-fat curd with a pinch of salt and cumin. Pack kadala curry in main compartment. Appam or idlis wrapped warm. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish curry with fresh coriander.

METHOD

1. Prepare the hung curd: Whip hung curd with roasted ground cumin, black pepper, amchur, and salt until completely smooth and airy. Taste — it should be thick, tangy, and well-seasoned. If too thick, add 1 tsp water and whisk again. The consistency should be dip-like — thick enough to coat a vegetable stick without dripping off.
2. Roast flaxseeds: Dry roast flaxseeds in a small pan over medium heat 2-3 minutes until they begin to pop and emit a nutty aroma. Cool. Sprinkle over the hung curd.
3. Pack: Spoon hung curd into the dip compartment of the snack box. Cucumber sticks and carrot sticks in the vegetable compartment. Flaxseeds on top of curd. Garnish with fresh mint leaf.

INGREDIENTS

- Ragi Flour — 90 g
- Gajar / Carrot — 40 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Sesame Seeds — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 15 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Curry Leaves — 3 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Groundnut Oil — 6 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 20 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g

METHOD

1. Knead the ragi dough: Mix ragi flour, finely chopped onion, grated carrot, minced green chilli, chopped curry leaves, fresh coriander, grated ginger, sesame seeds, and salt in a bowl. Add hot water gradually — ragi needs hot water to become pliable, unlike wheat. Start with 80ml hot water and knead with your palm, adding more a tablespoon at a time until a soft, non-sticky dough forms. It will never be as smooth as wheat dough — some roughness is correct.
2. Pat the rotis: Divide dough into 3 equal portions. Place one portion on a damp piece of food-grade plastic or banana leaf. Dip fingers in water and pat the dough into a rough 5-inch circle, 3mm thick. The edges will be irregular — that is correct and honest for ragi roti. No rolling pin needed.
3. Cook on tawa: Heat cast iron tawa to medium-high. Invert the patted roti onto the tawa — peel away the plastic gently. Cook 90 seconds until the surface is dry and edges begin to lift. Brush 2g oil on top and flip. Cook 2 minutes on the second side, pressing gently with a folded cloth to ensure even contact. The roti is done when both sides have brown spots and it feels firm.
4. Make peanut-coriander chutney: Blend roasted peanuts, heavy fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, salt, and 3 tbsp water to a coarse, textured chutney. In a tadka pan: heat 2g oil, add mustard seeds, wait for the pop, add curry leaves. Pour tadka over the chutney. Chutney should be thick, not watery.
5. Pack: Wrap 3 rotis individually in foil. Chutney in 40ml sealed pot. Cold curd in 60ml sealed pot — kept chilled until dispatch.

Odia Dalma with Brown Rice & Tomato Onion Kachumber

474 kcal

INGREDIENTS

- Toor Dal (cooked) — 80 g
- Drumstick — 60 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 60 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Ghee — 6 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 160 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Sweet Potato — 80 g
- Eggplant — 80 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the dalma: Combine toor dal, sweet potato, drumstick pieces, eggplant, tomato, onion, ginger, turmeric, salt, and 350ml water in a pressure cooker. Cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural pressure release. Open — the dal should be fully cooked and the vegetables tender. The dalma is intentionally thicker than dal fry — vegetables cook within the dal, not separately. Mash lightly if you prefer a creamier consistency, but chunks of sweet potato and brinjal are correct.
2. Finish with Odia tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat until shimmering. Add hing (it sizzles immediately). Add cumin seeds and let them crackle 20 seconds. Add red chilli powder — it blooms in the ghee instantly. Pour entire tadka over the dalma. Do not stir — let the aroma waft upward. Stir just before packing.
3. Make kachumber and pack: Toss finely diced tomato, onion, and cucumber with lemon juice, salt, and fresh coriander. Brown rice in one compartment. Dalma in main compartment. Kachumber in side compartment — keep cold.

INGREDIENTS

- Paneer Low Fat — 150 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Jowar Flour — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 250 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Ghee — 6 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g

METHOD

1. Blanch and puree the spinach: Bring a large pot of salted water to a vigorous boil. Drop spinach leaves in — blanch exactly 30 seconds, no more. Drain immediately and transfer to an ice bath (or run cold water) to stop the cooking and preserve the bright green colour. Blend the blanched spinach to a very smooth puree. This step is the difference between a vibrant green palak paneer and a dull army-green one.
2. Sear the paneer: Heat 4g ghee in a cast iron pan over high heat until shimmering. Add paneer cubes in a single layer. Sear 90 seconds per side until golden-brown with slightly crispy edges. The sear prevents the paneer from breaking down in the curry. Remove and set aside.
3. Build the masala: In the same pan, add oil and reduce heat to medium. Add cumin seeds, let them crackle. Add finely chopped onion and cook 6 minutes until golden. Add garlic, ginger, and green chilli paste — cook 2 minutes. Add blended tomato, turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Cook 5 minutes until oil separates.
4. Combine and finish: Add spinach puree to the masala. Stir well on medium heat 3 minutes. Add seared paneer cubes. Simmer 3 minutes. Add garam masala and crushed kasuri methi. Add lemon juice to preserve the green colour. Finish with a swirl of 2g ghee. The palak should be vibrant green, not dull.
5. Make jowar roti and pack: Knead jowar flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into a 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 2 min per side. Pack palak paneer in main compartment. Jowar roti wrapped in foil.

METHOD

- 1. Make oats idli: Mix finely ground oats into standard fermented idli batter along with curd and a pinch of salt. Batter should be slightly thicker than regular idli batter. Grease idli moulds with a drop of oil. Pour batter into 3 moulds. Steam on high heat 12 minutes until a toothpick inserted comes out clean.
- 2. Make quick sambar: Pressure cook toor dal with tomato, onion, drumstick, turmeric, and 200ml water for 2 whistles. Add tamarind extract and red chilli powder. Simmer 5 minutes. In a tadka pan, heat oil, add mustard seeds and curry leaves, pour over sambar.

BREAKFASTMumbaiStreet-Style Oats Poha with Crunchy Peanuts & Lemon*338 kcal14g protein50g carbs10g fat7g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Poha (cooked) — 80 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 25 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Seeds — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 30 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Oats (dry rolled) — 30 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Lemon Juice — 15 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

- 1. Rinse and prep the poha: Place poha in a colander and run cold water over it for 30 seconds, tossing gently with your hand. It should soften but not become mushy — individual flakes should separate. Drain immediately. Do not soak in a bowl of water — the poha will disintegrate. Sprinkle turmeric and a pinch of salt over the drained poha and toss to coat evenly. The colour should be a uniform golden yellow.
- 2. Roast the peanuts: Heat kadai over medium-high heat. Add peanuts without oil and roast 3 minutes, tossing frequently, until the skins begin to blister and crack and you can smell the roasted peanut aroma. Remove and set aside — they will continue to cook from residual heat.
- 3. Build the tadka: Heat oil in the same kadai over medium-high heat. Add mustard seeds — cover partially until they pop loudly (about 30 seconds). Add curry leaves and slit green chillies — stand back, they splutter violently. Add sliced onion and cook 3 minutes until translucent and beginning to colour at the edges.
- 4. Add oats then poha: Add rolled oats to the kadai and stir 1 minute until they absorb the oil and onion flavour. Now add the turmeric-coated poha. Fold gently using a spatula — do not stir aggressively or the poha will break into mush. Cook on medium heat 2 minutes. The poha should be heated through, evenly coated, and each flake separate. Add roasted peanuts and toss once more.
- 5. Finish and pack: Remove from heat. Squeeze lemon juice over the top and fold through. Taste — it should be savoury, slightly tangy, with distinct turmeric warmth and peanut crunch. Portion into box. Top with pomegranate arils and heavy coriander garnish.

- Ginger — 10 g
- Bay Leaves — 2 g
- Cloves — 1 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 120 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 100 g

- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Coriander Powder — 5 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Pressure cook the rajma: Drain soaked rajma. Pressure cook with 500ml fresh water and 1 tsp salt on high for 6-7 whistles. The rajma must be completely tender — press one bean between thumb and index finger; it should crush easily without resistance. Under-cooked rajma makes a poor masala. Allow natural pressure release before opening.
- 2. Caramelize the onion: Heat oil in a heavy kadai over medium-high heat. Add bay leaves, cinnamon, and cloves — sizzle 30 seconds. Add finely chopped onion and cook 8-10 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until deep golden-brown and caramelised — not just translucent. This step is the foundation of a great rajma masala. Add cumin seeds with the onion if you prefer — they toast in the oil alongside the onion.
- 3. Build the masala: Add ginger-garlic paste to the caramelised onion and cook 2 minutes until the raw smell disappears. Add blended tomato and cook on medium-high heat 6-8 minutes until the oil separates at the edges and the tomato masala is dark red and thick. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Cook 2 more minutes.
- 4. Combine and finish: Add pressure-cooked rajma with 100ml of its cooking liquid to the masala. Stir well. Bring to a simmer and cook uncovered 5 minutes — the masala will thicken and coat the beans. Add garam masala and kasuri methi (crushed in your palm). Add lemon juice. Taste and adjust salt. The final rajma should be rich, thick, and coat the back of a spoon. Garnish with fresh coriander.
- 5. Pack: Rajma in main compartment. 2 rotis wrapped in foil. Raw sliced onion with lemon juice in side compartment.

- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g

- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Bajra Flour — 70 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

1. Make the kanda lasun stuffing: In a bowl, combine: roasted crushed peanuts, roasted sesame seeds, finely chopped onion (raw), minced garlic, red chilli powder, coriander powder, turmeric, garam masala, amchur, jaggery, salt, fresh coriander, and lemon juice. Mix thoroughly — the mixture should be moist enough to pack into the brinjal but not wet. Taste — it should be intensely flavoured: spicy, garlicky, tangy, and slightly sweet from the jaggery.
2. Stuff the brinjals: Hold each slit brinjal open gently and pack stuffing into the cavity — use a small spoon to push it deep inside. Pack firmly. The brinjal should look slightly puffed. Seal by pressing the slit closed.
3. Cook the bharli vangi: Heat oil in a heavy pot over medium heat. Add mustard seeds and curry leaves — let them pop. Carefully place stuffed brinjals in a single layer. Sear 2 minutes turning gently. Reduce heat to low. Cover with a tight-fitting lid. Cook on low heat 18-20 minutes, turning the brinjals every 5 minutes. The brinjals are ready when completely tender when pierced with a knife and the filling is caramelised. No water is added — they steam in their own juices.
4. Make bhakri and pack: Knead bajra flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into thick 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 3 min per side — bajra bhakri takes longer than jowar. Pack 3 stuffed brinjals in main compartment. Bhakri wrapped in foil. Kachumber (diced tomato, cucumber, lemon, coriander) in side compartment.

- Salt — 2 g
- Ghee — 5 g
- Black Pepper — 1 g

- Fresh Mint — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

1. Roast the makhana: Heat a kadai over medium heat. Add ghee and let it melt. Add makhana and toss continuously for 5-6 minutes until they are crispy and light — a makhana is ready when you can break one cleanly between your fingers with a distinct snap. They should feel hollow and light. Add cumin seeds to the pan halfway through — they toast in the residual ghee. Remove from heat. Immediately toss with black pepper, amchur, red chilli powder, and salt while hot.
2. Make quick tamarind chutney: Combine tamarind extract with jaggery and 2 tbsp water in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce 2 minutes until slightly thickened. Add a pinch of red chilli powder. Cool. The chutney should be tangy-sweet.
3. Assemble and pack: Place roasted makhana in a snack box. Top with pomegranate arils and torn mint. Pack tamarind chutney in a 15ml pot on the side — never pre-dress makhana or they go soft immediately. Garnish with fresh coriander.

BREAKFAST

Maharashtrian Moong Dal Chilla with Green Chutney & Pomegranate Raita

355 kcal

25g protein

38g carbs

9g fat

10g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 120 g
- Fresh Mint — 10 g
- Cumin Seeds — 1 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the batter: Drain the soaked moong dal thoroughly — excess water makes flat, rubbery chillas. Grind with just enough water (about 3 tbsp) to make a thick, pourable batter the consistency of dosa batter. Add grated ginger, chopped green chilli, half the fresh coriander, cumin seeds, turmeric, and salt. Mix well. The batter should coat the back of a spoon thickly — if it runs off immediately, it is too thin.
2. Make the coriander-mint chutney: Blend remaining coriander, mint leaves, lemon juice, 1g roasted cumin seeds, 1 green chilli, a pinch of salt, and 2 tbsp water until smooth. Taste — it should be bright, sharp, and heavily herbed. If it tastes flat, add more lemon juice, not salt. Transfer to a 30ml sauce pot for packing.
3. Cook the chillas: Heat a cast iron tawa over medium-high heat for 2 full minutes — it must be evenly hot across the surface. Brush lightly with 2g oil using a folded tissue. Pour one ladle of batter (about 80g) and spread in a thin circle using the back of the ladle, moving outward in one confident spiral. Lower heat to medium. Cook undisturbed for 2.5 minutes until the edges lift and look dry — resist moving earlier. The surface will turn from glossy to matte. Drizzle 2g oil around the edges. Flip and cook 60 seconds on the second side until light golden. Repeat for all 4 chillas.
4. Prepare the raita: Whisk low-fat curd until completely smooth — any lumps will look unappetising. Fold in pomegranate arils, a pinch of roasted cumin powder, and a tiny pinch of salt. Do not add water or the raita will be too thin. Transfer to a 60ml pot.
5. Pack and assemble: Place 4 chillas folded in quarters in the main compartment. Raita pot and chutney pot go in separate compartments or in the side of the box. Label: "Open chutney pot first, drizzle over chilla, eat immediately for best texture." Ensure lids are sealed tightly — curd raita leaks easily.

- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g

- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Make the kanda lasun masala paste: In a dry pan, roast peanuts and sesame seeds separately until golden. Cool. Blend together with garlic, ginger, red chilli powder, and 3 tbsp water to a coarse paste. This is the kanda lasun (onion-garlic) masala base that gives Maharashtrian usal its unmistakable flavour. The paste should be aromatic and sharp with garlic.
- 2. Pressure cook the sprouts: Pressure cook the matki sprouts with 200ml water and a pinch of salt for 1 whistle only — the sprouts should be cooked through but still hold their shape with slight bite. Over-cooking makes them mushy. Allow natural pressure release.
- 3. Build the usal: Heat oil in kadai. Add mustard seeds and cumin seeds — wait for the pop. Add curry leaves. Add finely chopped onion and cook 6 minutes until golden. Add kanda lasun masala paste and cook 3 minutes, stirring continuously, until the paste darkens and the oil separates. Add chopped tomato, coriander powder, turmeric, and garam masala. Cook 4 minutes until the masala is dark and thick.
- 4. Combine and finish: Add pressure-cooked sprouts and 100ml water. Stir well. Simmer 5 minutes until the masala coats each sprout. The usal should be thick — not soupy. Add lemon juice, taste and adjust salt. The final usal must be bold: spicy, tangy, and garlicky. Garnish with fresh coriander and pomegranate arils.
- 5. Pack: Usal in main compartment. Whole wheat pav wrapped in foil. Green coriander chutney in 20ml pot. A wedge of lemon on the side.

- Fenugreek Seeds — 1 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 20 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Cook the dal: Pressure cook toor dal with tomato, onion, drumstick, eggplant, turmeric, and 350ml water for 3 whistles. Natural pressure release. Mash lightly with a ladle — the dal should be smooth with some vegetable texture remaining. The drumstick should be soft enough to extract pulp by running your teeth along it.
- 2. Add tamarind and simmer: Add tamarind extract, red chilli powder, coriander powder, roasted ground fenugreek seeds, and salt to the cooked dal. Stir well. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a vigorous simmer for 8 minutes. The sambar should reduce slightly and the raw tamarind smell should be gone — it becomes mellow and rounded. Taste: sambar should be sour, slightly spicy, and have the earthy depth from the fenugreek.
- 3. Finish with tadka: Heat oil in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add mustard seeds — wait for loud popping. Add curry leaves (crackle 10 seconds), then hing (sizzles immediately). Pour entire tadka into the simmering sambar. Stir once. The aroma should change dramatically — from sour lentils to vibrant, complex sambar. Garnish with fresh coriander.
- 4. Steam idlis and make chutney: Steam 3 idlis from fermented batter for 12 minutes until a toothpick comes out clean. For chutney: blend roasted peanuts with heavy fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, and salt to a coarse, bright green chutney.
- 5. Pack: Sambar in a 150ml leak-proof compartment. 3 idlis in main compartment. Chutney in a sealed 30ml pot. Pack immediately — idli served cold is a customer complaint waiting to happen.

- Green Chilli — 4 g

METHOD

1. Blend the sprouted moong batter: Blend sprouted moong with curd, grated ginger, green chilli, turmeric, salt, and minimal water (the sprouts are already moist) to a smooth batter the consistency of thick buttermilk. It should pour slowly. Rest 5 minutes.
2. Steam the dhokla: Grease a shallow steaming tray. Pour batter to 2cm depth. Steam on high heat for 12-14 minutes until a toothpick inserted in the centre comes out clean. Do not open the steamer before 12 minutes — temperature drop causes the dhokla to deflate.
3. Temper and cut: Heat oil in a small tadka pan. Add mustard seeds, wait for the pop. Add curry leaves and sesame seeds — 10 seconds. Pour over the steamed dhokla while it is still in the tray. Cut into bite-sized squares (4×4cm).

BREAKFASTPunjabi Missi Roti with Low-Fat Curd & Raw Onion Salad*370 kcal23g protein48g carbs9g fat9g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 60 g
- Methi Leaves — 30 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 150 g
- Cucumber — 60 g

- Ginger — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Ghee — 5 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Make the missi roti dough: Combine wheat flour and besan in a bowl. Add methi leaves, chopped onion, green chilli, grated ginger, crushed cumin seeds, red chilli powder, turmeric, and salt. Mix dry first. Add water gradually, kneading to a firm, non-sticky dough — firmer than regular roti dough because besan absorbs less water. Rest 10 minutes covered with a damp cloth. The methi will release moisture as it rests; do not add more water after resting.
2. Roll and cook the rotis: Divide dough into 2 equal balls (approx 80g each). Roll out on a lightly floured surface to 6-inch diameter, slightly thicker than regular roti — about 3mm. Heat tawa to medium-high. Cook first side 90 seconds until small brown spots appear underneath. Flip, cook 60 seconds. Flip again onto direct flame for 15 seconds for slight char marks on both sides. Remove immediately. Smear 2.5g ghee on each hot roti. The ghee is non-negotiable — it activates fat-soluble vitamins from the methi.
3. Prepare the onion-cucumber salad: Thinly slice onion and cucumber. Toss with lemon juice, a pinch of salt, and fresh coriander. The salad should be sharp and acidic — increase lemon if it tastes flat. Do not add oil to the salad.
4. Pack for delivery: Wrap each roti individually in foil. Pack curd in a 60ml sealed pot. Salad in a separate compartment. Include a note: "Unwrap roti, tear into pieces, dip in curd and salad."

- 1. Dry roast and grind the xacuti masala: In a dry pan over medium heat, roast together: fennel seeds, cloves, cinnamon, cardamom, peanuts, sesame seeds, and half the onion (roughly chopped). Stir continuously for 5-6 minutes until the onion is slightly charred and the spices are fragrant. Cool. Blend with garlic, ginger, kashmiri red chilli powder, coriander powder, and 4 tbsp water to a smooth, thick paste. This is the xacuti masala.
- 2. Press and sear the tofu: Press tofu between two plates with weight for 30 minutes to remove moisture. Cut into 3cm cubes. Season with a pinch of turmeric and salt. Heat 8g oil in a cast iron pan over high heat until shimmering. Add tofu cubes in a single layer. Sear 2 minutes per side until golden-brown and slightly crispy on the outside. The sear creates a crust that prevents the tofu from going mushy in the gravy.
- 3. Build the gravy: Heat 4g oil in a heavy pot. Add sliced remaining onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add tomatoes and cook 4 minutes. Add the xacuti masala paste and cook 4-5 minutes, stirring constantly, until darkened and oil separates. Add 200ml water, bring to simmer.
- 4. Braise tofu and finish: Add seared tofu to the simmering gravy. Spoon gravy over each piece. Simmer on low heat 8 minutes — the tofu will absorb the xacuti flavours. Add lemon juice, adjust salt. Garnish with fresh coriander. Pack brown rice in one compartment, xacuti in main compartment, kachumber (diced tomato + cucumber + lemon + coriander) in a side compartment.

INGREDIENTS

- Chickpea Flour — 90 g
- Mustard Oil — 10 g
- Fennel Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 4 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Bajra Flour — 80 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 120 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Garlic — 8 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Make and boil the gatte: Mix besan with 60g curd, 5g mustard oil, 1g cumin seeds, fennel seeds, 1g turmeric, 2g red chilli powder, and salt. Knead into a stiff, non-sticky dough — stiffer than roti dough. Divide into 3 portions. Roll each into a 1.5cm diameter rope. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Drop the ropes in and boil 8-10 minutes until they float and feel firm when pressed. Remove, cool slightly, cut into 3cm pieces (the gatte).
2. Build the yoghurt gravy: Heat mustard oil to smoking in a kadai, remove 30 seconds, return to medium heat. Add cumin seeds and hing — sizzle 20 seconds. Add chopped onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add garlic and ginger, cook 2 minutes. Add tomato and cook 4 minutes until soft. Reduce heat to low. Whisk remaining curd smooth and add slowly while stirring continuously — do not add cold curd over high heat or it will split. Add remaining turmeric, red chilli powder, coriander powder, and salt.
3. Combine and simmer: Add boiled gatte to the yoghurt gravy. Stir gently. Simmer on low heat 8 minutes — the gatte will absorb the gravy and swell slightly. The gravy should cling to each piece and look smooth and golden-orange. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and lemon juice. Garnish with fresh coriander.
4. Make bajra roti and pack: Knead bajra flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat two thick 5-inch circles. Cook on tawa 3 min each side — bajra takes longer than wheat. Pack gatte in main compartment. Bajra rotis wrapped in foil.

- Kala Chana — 60 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 40 g

- Pomegranate Arils — 20 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Cook kala chana: Drain soaked kala chana. Pressure cook with 300ml water and a pinch of salt for 5-6 whistles until completely tender — press one between fingers, it should crush easily. Drain, reserving the cooking water (rich in iron, can be used as soup base). Cool the chana.
- 2. Toss the chaat: In a bowl, combine cooked kala chana, diced onion, diced tomato (deseeded to prevent excess moisture), green chilli, grated ginger, amchur, roasted cumin powder, red chilli powder, and salt. Toss well. Add lemon juice and toss again. The chaat should be vibrant with every grain coated in the spice mix. Taste — if flat, add more amchur and lemon; if too sharp, balance with a pinch of salt.
- 3. Garnish and pack: Transfer to snack box. Garnish with fresh coriander and pomegranate arils on top. Pack a lemon wedge on the side. The chaat should look colourful and inviting — not brown and dull.

BREAKFASTAndhra-Style Pesarattu with Ginger Chutney & Moong Sprout Salad*345 kcal*23g protein*45g carbs*7g fat*11g fibre*INGREDIENTS

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 90 g
- Green Chilli — 8 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Ginger — 15 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 4 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 50 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ginger — 12 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Tamarind — 10 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 3 g
- Moong Dal (cooked) — 40 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 30 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

- 1. Grind the pesarattu batter: Drain soaked green moong thoroughly. Transfer to blender with ginger, green chilli, cumin seeds, salt, and approximately 80ml water. Blend to a smooth, flowing batter — slightly coarser than dosa batter is fine and actually preferred. The green colour from the moong skin is correct. Batter should flow easily from the ladle. Adjust water if needed — one tablespoon at a time.
- 2. Make the ginger-tamarind chutney: In a small pan, heat 4g groundnut oil over medium heat. Add sliced ginger and fry 2 minutes until it begins to colour at the edges. Add tamarind extract, red chilli powder, and salt. Cook 3 minutes until thick and fragrant. Remove from heat. In the same pan (wipe clean), heat remaining oil and add mustard seeds — wait until they pop, then add curry leaves and let them crisp 15 seconds. Pour this tadka over the chutney. The final chutney should be sharp, hot, and deeply gingery.
- 3. Cook the pesarattu: Heat cast iron tawa to high heat. Brush with 2g oil. Pour one ladle of batter (approximately 90g) and immediately spread outward in a fast, confident spiral using the back of the ladle. Lower heat to medium. Cook 2.5-3 minutes until edges are crisp and surface looks dry and matte — the green colour will deepen to dark olive. No flip needed for pesarattu — it is traditionally cooked one side only. Fold into a half-moon and remove.
- 4. Assemble the sprout salad: Toss moong sprouts, diced tomato, and finely diced onion with lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Fold in fresh coriander. The salad should be lightly dressed — not soaking. It provides volume, crunch, and additional protein.
- 5. Final pack: Place 2 pesarattu folded in compartment. Sprout salad in side compartment. Chutney pot sealed separately. Label: "Best within 20 min. Dip in chutney and eat with sprout salad."

- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g

- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Ghee — 8 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the lentils: Drain soaked urad dal and rajma. Add to pressure cooker with 600ml fresh water and a pinch of salt. Cook on high for 8-10 whistles — both urad and rajma must be completely broken down and tender. Natural pressure release. The urad should be releasing starch into the water, making it slightly viscous. Mash lightly with a whisk.
2. Build the tomato base: Heat ghee and oil in a heavy pot. Add finely chopped onion and cook 8 minutes until deeply golden. Add ginger-garlic paste and cook 3 minutes. Add blended tomato puree and cook 8-10 minutes on medium-high heat until the oil separates and the tomato is dark red. Add red chilli powder, coriander powder, and turmeric. Cook 2 more minutes.
3. Combine and simmer: Add pressure-cooked lentils to the tomato base. Stir well — the dal will look lighter at first but will deepen as it simmers. Add 100ml water if needed for consistency. Simmer uncovered on low heat 15 minutes, stirring every 3 minutes, until the dal is very thick and the masala is fully integrated. The dal should coat the back of a spoon thickly. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and a finishing drizzle of 4g ghee. Do not stir the ghee in — let it pool on top.
4. Make raita and pack: Whisk curd smooth. Mix in grated cucumber, lemon juice, roasted crushed cumin, and a pinch of salt. Pack dal in main compartment with ghee on top. Brown rice in side compartment. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish with fresh coriander.

- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

1. Cook the chickpeas: Drain soaked chickpeas. Pressure cook with 500ml water, bay leaves, cinnamon, cloves, and 1 tsp salt for 5-6 whistles until completely tender. Reserve cooking liquid — this is gold for the masala. Discard bay leaves, cinnamon, cloves.
2. Deeply caramelize the onion: Heat oil in a heavy kadai over medium-high heat. Add cumin seeds — crackle 20 seconds. Add finely chopped onion and cook 10-12 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until the onion is deep mahogany brown and reduced to a third of its original volume. This is the foundation — no shortcut replaces this step. Add ginger-garlic paste and cook 3 minutes.
3. Build the masala: Add blended tomato to the caramelised onion. Cook on medium-high heat 8-10 minutes until completely dried out and dark — the oil will separate and pool around the masala. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, coriander powder. Cook 2 minutes. The masala should be very dark red and thick.
4. Combine and finish: Add cooked chickpeas with 100ml of their cooking liquid. Stir well. Simmer 5 minutes. Add amchur, garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and lemon juice. Stir. The chana should be coated in a thick, dark masala — each chickpea visible but cloaked. Taste: bold, slightly tangy from amchur, with depth from the caramelised onion. Garnish with fresh coriander.
5. Pack: Chana in main compartment. Brown rice in second compartment. Raw sliced onion dressed with lemon and salt on the side.

METHOD

- 1. Prepare the hung curd: Whip hung curd with roasted ground cumin, black pepper, amchur, and salt until completely smooth and airy. Taste — it should be thick, tangy, and well-seasoned. If too thick, add 1 tsp water and whisk again. The consistency should be dip-like — thick enough to coat a vegetable stick without dripping off.
- 2. Roast flaxseeds: Dry roast flaxseeds in a small pan over medium heat 2-3 minutes until they begin to pop and emit a nutty aroma. Cool. Sprinkle over the hung curd.
- 3. Pack: Spoon hung curd into the dip compartment of the snack box. Cucumber sticks and carrot sticks in the vegetable compartment. Flaxseeds on top of curd. Garnish with fresh mint leaf.

BREAKFASTRajasthani Dalia Khichdi with Methi Tadka & Lemon*362 kcal18g protein53g carbs9g fat9g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Dalia — 70 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 4 g
- Lemon Juice — 15 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Moong Dal (cooked) — 40 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Oil — 8 g
- Fenugreek Seeds — 2 g
- Methi Leaves — 30 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

- 1. Dry roast the dalia: In a dry pressure cooker or heavy pot, roast the dalia over medium heat for 2 minutes, stirring continuously, until it smells nutty and a few grains begin to colour. This step is non-negotiable — it stops the khichdi from going gummy and adds a nutty depth. Remove and set aside.
- 2. Build the base: Heat mustard oil in the pressure cooker until it begins to smoke — remove from heat for 30 seconds, then return to medium heat. This removes the raw pungency of mustard oil. Add cumin seeds and fenugreek seeds and let them sizzle 30 seconds. Add chopped onion and cook 4 minutes until translucent. Add grated ginger and slit green chilli, cook 1 minute. Add tomatoes and cook 3 minutes until soft and the oil begins to show at the edges.
- 3. Pressure cook: Add roasted dalia, washed moong dal, turmeric, salt, and 600ml water. Stir well. Seal the pressure cooker and cook on high until one whistle, then reduce to low and cook 8 minutes. Turn off heat and allow natural pressure release — approximately 10 minutes. Open to reveal a thick, porridge-like consistency. If too thick, add 50ml hot water and stir.
- 4. Finish with methi and tadka: Stir in fresh methi leaves into the hot khichdi — they wilt from the heat alone, preserving their nutrients. In a small tadka pan, heat the remaining 2g mustard oil, add curry leaves and let them crisp 10 seconds. Pour over the khichdi. Squeeze fresh lemon juice over the top and stir through.
- 5. Garnish and pack: Portion into 400g serving bowl. Garnish with fresh coriander. Lemon wedge on the side if not already added. Seal lid tightly — khichdi retains moisture and holds well in transit.

INGREDIENTS

- Paneer (full fat) — 180 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 100 g
- Garlic — 8 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 1 g
- Black Pepper — 2 g
- Salt — 3 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Capsicum — 60 g

- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Capsicum — 50 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

- 1. Sauté the aromatics: Heat oil in a kadai over medium-high heat. Add finely diced onion and cook 4 minutes until soft and beginning to colour. Add minced garlic, grated ginger, and green chilli — cook 2 minutes. Add diced capsicum and toss 2 minutes until slightly softened but still with crunch. Add diced tomato and cook 3 minutes until soft and most moisture is gone. The base should be dry — paneer bhurji with a wet base goes soggy and watery.
- 2. Add spices and bloom: Reduce heat to medium. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Stir continuously for 60 seconds until the spices are fragrant and darken slightly. The spices must be bloomed in the oil — adding them after the paneer produces a raw, gritty spice flavour.
- 3. Add paneer and scramble: Add crumbled paneer to the masala base. Fold gently using a spatula — do not stir aggressively or the paneer becomes paste. Cook on medium heat 3 minutes, folding every minute, until the paneer is coated in the masala and heated through. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, freshly cracked black pepper, and lemon juice. Fold once more. The bhurji should look like golden scrambled eggs with red and green flecks. Taste — bold, slightly tangy, peppery.
- 4. Pack with brown rice and salad: Pack paneer bhurji in main compartment. Brown rice in second compartment. Julienned raw capsicum and sliced cucumber tossed with lemon juice and a pinch of salt in side compartment. Garnish bhurji with fresh coriander.

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the khichdi: In a pressure cooker, combine rice, toor dal, moong dal, masoor dal, chopped onion, tomato, ginger, green chilli, turmeric, cloves, cinnamon, bay leaf, salt, and 500ml water. Stir well. Pressure cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural pressure release 10 minutes. Open — the khichdi should be a thick, porridge-like consistency with no individual grain or dal visible. Stir vigorously to create a smooth, lump-free texture.
2. The essential ghee-cumin tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat until shimmering and lightly smoking. Add cumin seeds — they should crackle immediately and darkly. Add hing (sizzles). Remove from heat and pour immediately over the khichdi. Do not stir in — let the sizzling ghee pool on top. The customer sees it, smells it, and then stirs it themselves.
3. Make kachumber and pack: Toss diced tomato, cucumber, and fresh coriander with lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Portion khichdi with ghee tadka on top into the main compartment. Kachumber in a sealed side compartment.

Gujarati Oats Handvo with Green Chutney

10g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Oats (dry rolled) — 60 g
- Lauki — 100 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Sesame Seeds — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 15 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g
- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 40 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 4 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the handvo batter: Combine coarsely ground oats with curd and 30ml water. Mix and rest 15 minutes — the oats will absorb the curd and soften. After resting, add grated lauki (squeezed), chopped spinach, minced green chilli, grated ginger, turmeric, red chilli powder, and salt. The batter should be thick and drop from a spoon slowly — not pour.
2. Do the tadka: Heat 4g oil in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add mustard seeds — wait for them to splutter loudly (about 30 seconds). Add curry leaves and let them crackle 10 seconds. Add sesame seeds, toss quickly for 5 seconds. Immediately pour HALF this tadka into the batter and mix through. Reserve the other half for the top.
3. Cook the handvo: Heat a thick-bottomed non-stick pan over medium heat with 4g oil. Pour in batter and spread to a 2cm thick disc — do not make it too thin or it will dry out. Scatter remaining tadka (with sesame) over the top. Cover with a lid and cook on low-medium heat for 12 minutes. The bottom should be deep golden — lift a corner gently at 10 minutes to check. Flip carefully (use a plate to invert, then slide back into pan) and cook uncovered 5 minutes on the second side.
4. Make green chutney and pack: Blend fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, a pinch of salt, and 2 tbsp water until smooth. Pack 2 handvo wedges in main compartment, chutney in a sealed 30ml pot on the side.

- Cloves — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Ghee — 4 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Prepare and sear the cauliflower steaks: Slice the cauliflower head from crown to stem into 2.5cm steaks — you will get 2 full steaks and some florets from the sides. Season steaks generously with salt and a pinch of turmeric on both sides. Heat cast iron pan over maximum heat for 3 full minutes. Add 8g oil and let it just begin to smoke. Place cauliflower steaks flat-side down — press firmly with a spatula. Cook undisturbed 3-4 minutes until deep golden-brown with caramelised crust. Flip once. Cook 2 minutes on the second side. Remove to a plate.
2. Build the Chettinad spice base: In a heavy-bottomed pot, heat 4g oil over medium heat. Add cinnamon, cloves, cardamom, and fennel seeds — let them sizzle 30 seconds until fragrant. Add sliced onion and cook 6 minutes over medium heat until deeply golden — this takes time and patience. Add crushed garlic and ginger, cook 2 minutes. Add red chilli powder, coriander powder, remaining turmeric, and freshly cracked black pepper. Stir 1 minute over heat until the spices are aromatic and darkened slightly.
3. Make the gravy and braise the steaks: Add chopped tomatoes to the spice base and cook 5 minutes until they collapse and the oil separates at the edges — a visual cue that the masala is ready. Add 150ml water and bring to a simmer. Carefully lower the seared cauliflower steaks into the gravy. Spoon gravy over the top. Cover and braise on low heat 8 minutes. The gravy should thicken and cling to the steaks. Add lemon juice, taste and adjust salt. The gravy should be bold, peppery, and aromatic.
4. Finish the brown rice: Heat a small pan, add ghee and curry leaves — let them crackle 10 seconds. Pour over cooked brown rice and toss to coat. Season lightly with salt. The curry-leaf-ghee rice should be fragrant and each grain separate.
5. Pack and garnish: Spoon brown rice into one compartment. Place cauliflower steak in the main compartment and ladle generous gravy over it. Garnish with fresh coriander.

- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 6 g
- Tamarind — 8 g
- Idli (steamed) — 80 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Cook the kadala: Pressure cook soaked black chickpeas with 400ml water and a pinch of salt for 6-7 whistles — black chickpeas are denser than white and need more cooking time. They should be completely tender: press one between fingers and it should yield with zero resistance. Reserve the dark cooking liquid — it adds colour and depth to the curry.
2. Make the Malabar masala paste: Dry roast peanuts and sesame seeds until golden. Cool. Grind with garlic, ginger, fennel seeds, coriander powder, red chilli powder, turmeric, tamarind extract, and 4 tbsp water to a smooth paste. This is the heart of the Malabar masala — the peanut-sesame-tamarind combination creates the characteristic thick, slightly nutty, sour-spiced base of Malabar coastal cooking.
3. Build the curry: Heat oil in kadai. Add mustard seeds — pop. Add curry leaves (generous amount — let them crackle fully). Add sliced onion and cook 6 minutes golden. Add the masala paste and cook 4 minutes until darkened. Add chopped tomato and cook 4 minutes until oil separates. Add cooked kadala with 150ml of their dark cooking liquid. Stir well. Simmer 8 minutes. Add garam masala and lemon juice. The curry should be thick, dark, and coat the chickpeas.
4. Make cucumber raita and pack: Grate cucumber, squeeze water, fold into whisked low-fat curd with a pinch of salt and cumin. Pack kadala curry in main compartment. Appam or idlis wrapped warm. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish curry with fresh coriander.

- Fresh Mint — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

1. Roast the makhana: Heat a kadai over medium heat. Add ghee and let it melt. Add makhana and toss continuously for 5-6 minutes until they are crispy and light — a makhana is ready when you can break one cleanly between your fingers with a distinct snap. They should feel hollow and light. Add cumin seeds to the pan halfway through — they toast in the residual ghee. Remove from heat. Immediately toss with black pepper, amchur, red chilli powder, and salt while hot.
2. Make quick tamarind chutney: Combine tamarind extract with jaggery and 2 tbsp water in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce 2 minutes until slightly thickened. Add a pinch of red chilli powder. Cool. The chutney should be tangy-sweet.
3. Assemble and pack: Place roasted makhana in a snack box. Top with pomegranate arils and torn mint. Pack tamarind chutney in a 15ml pot on the side — never pre-dress makhana or they go soft immediately. Garnish with fresh coriander.

- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Ginger — 10 g
- Cardamom — 1 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 10 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Cucumber — 80 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Grind the batter: Drain soaked chana dal and blend with grated ginger, green chilli, cardamom seeds, cumin seeds, turmeric, salt, and 70ml water to a smooth batter. It should be slightly thicker than moong dal batter — chana dal is denser. The batter will be pale yellow with tiny black cardamom specks. Rest 5 minutes before use.
2. Make the kasundi-style mustard dip: Grind mustard seeds with 2 tbsp water, green chilli, lemon juice, turmeric, and a pinch of salt to a coarse, pungent paste. Do not over-blend — some texture is correct for kasundi. Taste: it should be aggressively mustardy, sharp, and spicy. Adjust lemon for brightness. Transfer to a 30ml pot.
3. Cook the cheelas: Heat cast iron tawa to high, brush with 2g mustard oil (the Bengali flavour is incomplete without mustard oil). Pour one ladle of batter, spread to 6-inch circle. Reduce to medium heat. Cook 2.5 minutes until edges lift and surface is matte. Drizzle 1g oil around the edges. Flip and cook 60 seconds. Cheela should be evenly golden with some brown spots — not pale.
4. Pack and serve: Place 4 cheelas folded in the box. Julienned cucumber in side compartment with a squeeze of lemon and pinch of salt. Kasundi pot sealed. Include note: "Dip cheela in kasundi, eat with cucumber strips."

Kashmiri Haak Saag with Masoor Dal & Roti

482 kcal

29g protein

72g carbs

9g fat

18g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 200 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Garlic — 10 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Mustard Oil — 10 g
- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 120 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Masoor Dal (cooked) — 80 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Cook the masoor dal: In a pressure cooker, combine masoor dal, sliced onion, chopped tomato, half the garlic, turmeric, salt, and 300ml water. Pressure cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural release. Open and mash lightly with the back of a spoon — dal should be thick and creamy, not soupy. If too thick, add hot water to desired consistency.
2. Cook the haak (Kashmiri greens): In a kadai, heat mustard oil to smoking point — remove from heat 30 seconds, return to medium. Add hing (it will sizzle immediately) then cumin seeds. Add remaining garlic and cook 1 minute. Add torn spinach leaves in batches — they will wilt dramatically. Add dry ginger powder, kashmiri red chilli powder, and salt. Cook on medium-high heat 5 minutes, tossing occasionally, until greens are tender and all moisture has evaporated. The greens should look glossy with oil coating each leaf.
3. Finish the dal with tadka: Heat 2g oil in a small tadka pan. Add cumin seeds, let sizzle 20 seconds. Pour over cooked dal. Add lemon juice to dal and stir. Garnish with fresh coriander.
4. Pack: Dal in one compartment, haak saag in second compartment, 2 rotis wrapped in foil on the side.

- Paneer Low Fat — 150 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Jowar Flour — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 250 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Ghee — 6 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g

METHOD

1. Blanch and puree the spinach: Bring a large pot of salted water to a vigorous boil. Drop spinach leaves in — blanch exactly 30 seconds, no more. Drain immediately and transfer to an ice bath (or run cold water) to stop the cooking and preserve the bright green colour. Blend the blanched spinach to a very smooth puree. This step is the difference between a vibrant green palak paneer and a dull army-green one.
2. Sear the paneer: Heat 4g ghee in a cast iron pan over high heat until shimmering. Add paneer cubes in a single layer. Sear 90 seconds per side until golden-brown with slightly crispy edges. The sear prevents the paneer from breaking down in the curry. Remove and set aside.
3. Build the masala: In the same pan, add oil and reduce heat to medium. Add cumin seeds, let them crackle. Add finely chopped onion and cook 6 minutes until golden. Add garlic, ginger, and green chilli paste — cook 2 minutes. Add blended tomato, turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Cook 5 minutes until oil separates.
4. Combine and finish: Add spinach puree to the masala. Stir well on medium heat 3 minutes. Add seared paneer cubes. Simmer 3 minutes. Add garam masala and crushed kasuri methi. Add lemon juice to preserve the green colour. Finish with a swirl of 2g ghee. The palak should be vibrant green, not dull.
5. Make jowar roti and pack: Knead jowar flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into a 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 2 min per side. Pack palak paneer in main compartment. Jowar roti wrapped in foil.

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 3 g
- Fresh Mint — 8 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 40 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Sesame Seeds — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g

METHOD

- 1. Blend the sprouted moong batter: Blend sprouted moong with curd, grated ginger, green chilli, turmeric, salt, and minimal water (the sprouts are already moist) to a smooth batter the consistency of thick buttermilk. It should pour slowly. Rest 5 minutes.
- 2. Steam the dhokla: Grease a shallow steaming tray. Pour batter to 2cm depth. Steam on high heat for 12-14 minutes until a toothpick inserted in the centre comes out clean. Do not open the steamer before 12 minutes — temperature drop causes the dhokla to deflate.
- 3. Temper and cut: Heat oil in a small tadka pan. Add mustard seeds, wait for the pop. Add curry leaves and sesame seeds — 10 seconds. Pour over the steamed dhokla while it is still in the tray. Cut into bite-sized squares (4×4cm).
- 4. Make chutney and pack: Blend coriander, mint, lemon juice, green chilli, and a pinch of salt with minimal water to a bright green chutney. Pack 6-8 dhokla bites in snack box. Chutney in 20ml pot on the side.

- Fresh Coriander — 15 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Curry Leaves — 3 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g

- Groundnut Oil — 6 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 20 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g

METHOD

- 1. Knead the ragi dough: Mix ragi flour, finely chopped onion, grated carrot, minced green chilli, chopped curry leaves, fresh coriander, grated ginger, sesame seeds, and salt in a bowl. Add hot water gradually — ragi needs hot water to become pliable, unlike wheat. Start with 80ml hot water and knead with your palm, adding more a tablespoon at a time until a soft, non-sticky dough forms. It will never be as smooth as wheat dough — some roughness is correct.
- 2. Pat the rotis: Divide dough into 3 equal portions. Place one portion on a damp piece of food-grade plastic or banana leaf. Dip fingers in water and pat the dough into a rough 5-inch circle, 3mm thick. The edges will be irregular — that is correct and honest for ragi roti. No rolling pin needed.
- 3. Cook on tawa: Heat cast iron tawa to medium-high. Invert the patted roti onto the tawa — peel away the plastic gently. Cook 90 seconds until the surface is dry and edges begin to lift. Brush 2g oil on top and flip. Cook 2 minutes on the second side, pressing gently with a folded cloth to ensure even contact. The roti is done when both sides have brown spots and it feels firm.
- 4. Make peanut-coriander chutney: Blend roasted peanuts, heavy fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, salt, and 3 tbsp water to a coarse, textured chutney. In a tadka pan: heat 2g oil, add mustard seeds, wait for the pop, add curry leaves. Pour tadka over the chutney. Chutney should be thick, not watery.
- 5. Pack: Wrap 3 rotis individually in foil. Chutney in 40ml sealed pot. Cold curd in 60ml sealed pot — kept chilled until dispatch.

INGREDIENTS

- Eggplant — 200 g
- Sesame Seeds — 20 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Coriander Powder — 4 g
- Groundnut Oil — 12 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 40 g
- Tamarind — 15 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 60 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 4 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Jowar Flour — 80 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

- 1. Dry roast peanuts and sesame: In a dry heavy pan over medium heat, roast peanuts 4 minutes until golden and fragrant. Remove. In the same pan, roast sesame seeds 2 minutes until lightly golden and popping. Remove. Cool completely. Grind together with garlic, ginger, red chilli powder, coriander powder, and 3 tbsp water to a coarse, thick paste. This is the heart of bagara baingan — do not rush the roasting.
- 2. Fry the brinjals: Heat 8g oil in the heavy pot over medium-high heat. Add the slit brinjals and fry 5-6 minutes, turning occasionally, until each side is slightly charred and the brinjal is 70% cooked through — it should yield when pressed but not collapse. Remove and set aside. This partial frying seals the brinjal so it doesn't disintegrate in the gravy.
- 3. Build the gravy: In the same pot, heat remaining 4g oil. Add mustard seeds and cumin seeds, let them pop. Add curry leaves. Add sliced onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add tomato and cook 3 minutes. Add the ground peanut-sesame masala paste and cook 4 minutes, stirring, until the paste darkens slightly and the oil begins to separate. Add tamarind extract, 100ml water, turmeric, and salt. Bring to a simmer.
- 4. Braise and finish: Lower the fried brinjals into the simmering gravy. Spoon gravy over them. Cover and cook on low heat 8 minutes until the brinjals are completely tender and have absorbed the gravy. The final gravy should be thick, rich, and cling to the brinjals. Adjust salt. Garnish with fresh coriander.
- 5. Make jowar bhakri and pack: Knead jowar flour with hot water (jowar needs hot water) into a soft dough. Divide into 2 balls. Pat each into a 5-inch circle on a damp cloth — jowar has no gluten so it cannot be rolled. Cook on tawa 2 min per side. Pack brinjal curry in main compartment, bhakri wrapped in foil, raw onion-lemon salad in side compartment.

- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Bajra Flour — 70 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

1. Make the kanda lasun stuffing: In a bowl, combine: roasted crushed peanuts, roasted sesame seeds, finely chopped onion (raw), minced garlic, red chilli powder, coriander powder, turmeric, garam masala, amchur, jaggery, salt, fresh coriander, and lemon juice. Mix thoroughly — the mixture should be moist enough to pack into the brinjal but not wet. Taste — it should be intensely flavoured: spicy, garlicky, tangy, and slightly sweet from the jaggery.
2. Stuff the brinjals: Hold each slit brinjal open gently and pack stuffing into the cavity — use a small spoon to push it deep inside. Pack firmly. The brinjal should look slightly puffed. Seal by pressing the slit closed.
3. Cook the bharli vangi: Heat oil in a heavy pot over medium heat. Add mustard seeds and curry leaves — let them pop. Carefully place stuffed brinjals in a single layer. Sear 2 minutes turning gently. Reduce heat to low. Cover with a tight-fitting lid. Cook on low heat 18-20 minutes, turning the brinjals every 5 minutes. The brinjals are ready when completely tender when pierced with a knife and the filling is caramelised. No water is added — they steam in their own juices.
4. Make bhakri and pack: Knead bajra flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into thick 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 3 min per side — bajra bhakri takes longer than jowar. Pack 3 stuffed brinjals in main compartment. Bhakri wrapped in foil. Kachumber (diced tomato, cucumber, lemon, coriander) in side compartment.

- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Cook kala chana: Drain soaked kala chana. Pressure cook with 300ml water and a pinch of salt for 5-6 whistles until completely tender — press one between fingers, it should crush easily. Drain, reserving the cooking water (rich in iron, can be used as soup base). Cool the chana.
2. Toss the chaat: In a bowl, combine cooked kala chana, diced onion, diced tomato (deseeded to prevent excess moisture), green chilli, grated ginger, amchur, roasted cumin powder, red chilli powder, and salt. Toss well. Add lemon juice and toss again. The chaat should be vibrant with every grain coated in the spice mix. Taste — if flat, add more amchur and lemon; if too sharp, balance with a pinch of salt.
3. Garnish and pack: Transfer to snack box. Garnish with fresh coriander and pomegranate arils on top. Pack a lemon wedge on the side. The chaat should look colourful and inviting — not brown and dull.

Mumbai Street-Style Oats Poha with Crunchy Peanuts & Lemon

338 kcal

14g protein

50g carbs

10g fat

7g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Poha (cooked) — 80 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 25 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Seeds — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 30 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Oats (dry rolled) — 30 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Lemon Juice — 15 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

1. Rinse and prep the poha: Place poha in a colander and run cold water over it for 30 seconds, tossing gently with your hand. It should soften but not become mushy — individual flakes should separate. Drain immediately. Do not soak in a bowl of water — the poha will disintegrate. Sprinkle turmeric and a pinch of salt over the drained poha and toss to coat evenly. The colour should be a uniform golden yellow.
2. Roast the peanuts: Heat kadai over medium-high heat. Add peanuts without oil and roast 3 minutes, tossing frequently, until the skins begin to blister and crack and you can smell the roasted peanut aroma. Remove and set aside — they will continue to cook from residual heat.
3. Build the tadka: Heat oil in the same kadai over medium-high heat. Add mustard seeds — cover partially until they pop loudly (about 30 seconds). Add curry leaves and slit green chillies — stand back, they splutter violently. Add sliced onion and cook 3 minutes until translucent and beginning to colour at the edges.
4. Add oats then poha: Add rolled oats to the kadai and stir 1 minute until they absorb the oil and onion flavour. Now add the turmeric-coated poha. Fold gently using a spatula — do not stir aggressively or the poha will break into mush. Cook on medium heat 2 minutes. The poha should be heated through, evenly coated, and each flake separate. Add roasted peanuts and toss once more.
5. Finish and pack: Remove from heat. Squeeze lemon juice over the top and fold through. Taste — it should be savoury, slightly tangy, with distinct turmeric warmth and peanut crunch. Portion into box. Top with pomegranate arils and heavy coriander garnish.

- Gajar / Carrot — 60 g
- Ginger — 8 g

- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook everything together: In a pressure cooker, combine: spinach, methi, soaked chana dal, tomato, onion, broccoli, carrot, half the garlic, ginger, green chilli, turmeric, red chilli powder, salt, and 200ml water. Everything goes in raw — this is the beauty of sai bhaji. Seal and pressure cook on high for 4 whistles. Allow natural release 10 minutes. Open and roughly mash with a ladle — the vegetables should be completely soft and the dal dissolved into a thick, green mass. Taste and adjust salt.
2. The essential ghee-garlic tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add cumin seeds — let them crackle 20 seconds. Add remaining garlic (thinly sliced) and fry until golden-brown and crispy — about 90 seconds. The garlic must be properly golden, not pale or it won't have the right flavour. Pour this tadka in its entirety over the sai bhaji. Stir through. The aroma should change immediately — from vegetal to rich and garlicky.
3. Make cucumber raita: Grate cucumber and squeeze out excess water. Whisk curd until smooth. Fold in grated cucumber, lemon juice, and a pinch of salt. Keep chilled.
4. Pack and garnish: Brown rice in one compartment. Sai bhaji with ghee tadka in main compartment. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish sai bhaji with fresh coriander and a squeeze of lemon.

- Fenugreek Seeds — 1 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 20 g
- Green Chilli — 4 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Cook the dal: Pressure cook toor dal with tomato, onion, drumstick, eggplant, turmeric, and 350ml water for 3 whistles. Natural pressure release. Mash lightly with a ladle — the dal should be smooth with some vegetable texture remaining. The drumstick should be soft enough to extract pulp by running your teeth along it.
2. Add tamarind and simmer: Add tamarind extract, red chilli powder, coriander powder, roasted ground fenugreek seeds, and salt to the cooked dal. Stir well. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a vigorous simmer for 8 minutes. The sambar should reduce slightly and the raw tamarind smell should be gone — it becomes mellow and rounded. Taste: sambar should be sour, slightly spicy, and have the earthy depth from the fenugreek.
3. Finish with tadka: Heat oil in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add mustard seeds — wait for loud popping. Add curry leaves (crackle 10 seconds), then hing (sizzles immediately). Pour entire tadka into the simmering sambar. Stir once. The aroma should change dramatically — from sour lentils to vibrant, complex sambar. Garnish with fresh coriander.
4. Steam idlis and make chutney: Steam 3 idlis from fermented batter for 12 minutes until a toothpick comes out clean. For chutney: blend roasted peanuts with heavy fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, and salt to a coarse, bright green chutney.
5. Pack: Sambar in a 150ml leak-proof compartment. 3 idlis in main compartment. Chutney in a sealed 30ml pot. Pack immediately — idli served cold is a customer complaint waiting to happen.

METHOD

1. Prepare the hung curd: Whip hung curd with roasted ground cumin, black pepper, amchur, and salt until completely smooth and airy. Taste — it should be thick, tangy, and well-seasoned. If too thick, add 1 tsp water and whisk again. The consistency should be dip-like — thick enough to coat a vegetable stick without dripping off.
2. Roast flaxseeds: Dry roast flaxseeds in a small pan over medium heat 2-3 minutes until they begin to pop and emit a nutty aroma. Cool. Sprinkle over the hung curd.
3. Pack: Spoon hung curd into the dip compartment of the snack box. Cucumber sticks and carrot sticks in the vegetable compartment. Flaxseeds on top of curd. Garnish with fresh mint leaf.

Maharashtrian Moong Dal Chilla with Green Chutney & Pomegranate Raita

355 kcal

25g protein

38g carbs

9g fat

10g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 120 g
- Fresh Mint — 10 g
- Cumin Seeds — 1 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the batter: Drain the soaked moong dal thoroughly — excess water makes flat, rubbery chillas. Grind with just enough water (about 3 tbsp) to make a thick, pourable batter the consistency of dosa batter. Add grated ginger, chopped green chilli, half the fresh coriander, cumin seeds, turmeric, and salt. Mix well. The batter should coat the back of a spoon thickly — if it runs off immediately, it is too thin.
2. Make the coriander-mint chutney: Blend remaining coriander, mint leaves, lemon juice, 1g roasted cumin seeds, 1 green chilli, a pinch of salt, and 2 tbsp water until smooth. Taste — it should be bright, sharp, and heavily herbed. If it tastes flat, add more lemon juice, not salt. Transfer to a 30ml sauce pot for packing.
3. Cook the chillas: Heat a cast iron tawa over medium-high heat for 2 full minutes — it must be evenly hot across the surface. Brush lightly with 2g oil using a folded tissue. Pour one ladle of batter (about 80g) and spread in a thin circle using the back of the ladle, moving outward in one confident spiral. Lower heat to medium. Cook undisturbed for 2.5 minutes until the edges lift and look dry — resist moving earlier. The surface will turn from glossy to matte. Drizzle 2g oil around the edges. Flip and cook 60 seconds on the second side until light golden. Repeat for all 4 chillas.
4. Prepare the raita: Whisk low-fat curd until completely smooth — any lumps will look unappetising. Fold in pomegranate arils, a pinch of roasted cumin powder, and a tiny pinch of salt. Do not add water or the raita will be too thin. Transfer to a 60ml pot.
5. Pack and assemble: Place 4 chillas folded in quarters in the main compartment. Raita pot and chutney pot go in separate compartments or in the side of the box. Label: "Open chutney pot first, drizzle over chilla, eat immediately for best texture." Ensure lids are sealed tightly — curd raita leaks easily.

- Ginger — 8 g
- Ghee — 6 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 160 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Sweet Potato — 80 g

- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the dalma: Combine toor dal, sweet potato, drumstick pieces, eggplant, tomato, onion, ginger, turmeric, salt, and 350ml water in a pressure cooker. Cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural pressure release. Open — the dal should be fully cooked and the vegetables tender. The dalma is intentionally thicker than dal fry — vegetables cook within the dal, not separately. Mash lightly if you prefer a creamier consistency, but chunks of sweet potato and brinjal are correct.
2. Finish with Odia tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat until shimmering. Add hing (it sizzles immediately). Add cumin seeds and let them crackle 20 seconds. Add red chilli powder — it blooms in the ghee instantly. Pour entire tadka over the dalma. Do not stir — let the aroma waft upward. Stir just before packing.
3. Make kachumber and pack: Toss finely diced tomato, onion, and cucumber with lemon juice, salt, and fresh coriander. Brown rice in one compartment. Dalma in main compartment. Kachumber in side compartment — keep cold.

- Chickpea Flour — 90 g
- Mustard Oil — 10 g
- Fennel Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 4 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Bajra Flour — 80 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 120 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Hing — 1 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Garlic — 8 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Make and boil the gatte: Mix besan with 60g curd, 5g mustard oil, 1g cumin seeds, fennel seeds, 1g turmeric, 2g red chilli powder, and salt. Knead into a stiff, non-sticky dough — stiffer than roti dough. Divide into 3 portions. Roll each into a 1.5cm diameter rope. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Drop the ropes in and boil 8-10 minutes until they float and feel firm when pressed. Remove, cool slightly, cut into 3cm pieces (the gatte).
2. Build the yoghurt gravy: Heat mustard oil to smoking in a kadai, remove 30 seconds, return to medium heat. Add cumin seeds and hing — sizzle 20 seconds. Add chopped onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add garlic and ginger, cook 2 minutes. Add tomato and cook 4 minutes until soft. Reduce heat to low. Whisk remaining curd smooth and add slowly while stirring continuously — do not add cold curd over high heat or it will split. Add remaining turmeric, red chilli powder, coriander powder, and salt.
3. Combine and simmer: Add boiled gatte to the yoghurt gravy. Stir gently. Simmer on low heat 8 minutes — the gatte will absorb the gravy and swell slightly. The gravy should cling to each piece and look smooth and golden-orange. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and lemon juice. Garnish with fresh coriander.
4. Make bajra roti and pack: Knead bajra flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat two thick 5-inch circles. Cook on tawa 3 min each side — bajra takes longer than wheat. Pack gatte in main compartment. Bajra rotis wrapped in foil.

METHOD

1. Make oats idli: Mix finely ground oats into standard fermented idli batter along with curd and a pinch of salt. Batter should be slightly thicker than regular idli batter. Grease idli moulds with a drop of oil. Pour batter into 3 moulds. Steam on high heat 12 minutes until a toothpick inserted comes out clean.
2. Make quick sambar: Pressure cook toor dal with tomato, onion, drumstick, turmeric, and 200ml water for 2 whistles. Add tamarind extract and red chilli powder. Simmer 5 minutes. In a tadka pan, heat oil, add mustard seeds and curry leaves, pour over sambar.
3. Make peanut-coriander chutney and pack: Blend roasted peanuts with fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, and salt to a coarse chutney. Pack 3 idlis in compartment box. Sambar (60ml) in a leak-proof pot. Chutney (25ml) in a sealed pot.

BREAKFASTPunjabi Missi Roti with Low-Fat Curd & Raw Onion Salad*370 kcal23g protein48g carbs9g fat9g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 60 g
- Methi Leaves — 30 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 150 g
- Cucumber — 60 g

- Pyaaz / Onion — 30 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Ghee — 5 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Make the missi roti dough: Combine wheat flour and besan in a bowl. Add methi leaves, chopped onion, green chilli, grated ginger, crushed cumin seeds, red chilli powder, turmeric, and salt. Mix dry first. Add water gradually, kneading to a firm, non-sticky dough — firmer than regular roti dough because besan absorbs less water. Rest 10 minutes covered with a damp cloth. The methi will release moisture as it rests; do not add more water after resting.
2. Roll and cook the rotis: Divide dough into 2 equal balls (approx 80g each). Roll out on a lightly floured surface to 6-inch diameter, slightly thicker than regular roti — about 3mm. Heat tawa to medium-high. Cook first side 90 seconds until small brown spots appear underneath. Flip, cook 60 seconds. Flip again onto direct flame for 15 seconds for slight char marks on both sides. Remove immediately. Smear 2.5g ghee on each hot roti. The ghee is non-negotiable — it activates fat-soluble vitamins from the methi.
3. Prepare the onion-cucumber salad: Thinly slice onion and cucumber. Toss with lemon juice, a pinch of salt, and fresh coriander. The salad should be sharp and acidic — increase lemon if it tastes flat. Do not add oil to the salad.
4. Pack for delivery: Wrap each roti individually in foil. Pack curd in a 60ml sealed pot. Salad in a separate compartment. Include a note: "Unwrap roti, tear into pieces, dip in curd and salad."

- Rajma (cooked) — 90 g

- Bay Leaves — 2 g
- Cloves — 1 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 120 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 100 g
- Garlic — 15 g

- Cinnamon — 2 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Coriander Powder — 5 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 40 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the rajma: Drain soaked rajma. Pressure cook with 500ml fresh water and 1 tsp salt on high for 6-7 whistles. The rajma must be completely tender — press one bean between thumb and index finger; it should crush easily without resistance. Under-cooked rajma makes a poor masala. Allow natural pressure release before opening.
2. Caramelize the onion: Heat oil in a heavy kadai over medium-high heat. Add bay leaves, cinnamon, and cloves — sizzle 30 seconds. Add finely chopped onion and cook 8-10 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until deep golden-brown and caramelised — not just translucent. This step is the foundation of a great rajma masala. Add cumin seeds with the onion if you prefer — they toast in the oil alongside the onion.
3. Build the masala: Add ginger-garlic paste to the caramelised onion and cook 2 minutes until the raw smell disappears. Add blended tomato and cook on medium-high heat 6-8 minutes until the oil separates at the edges and the tomato masala is dark red and thick. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Cook 2 more minutes.
4. Combine and finish: Add pressure-cooked rajma with 100ml of its cooking liquid to the masala. Stir well. Bring to a simmer and cook uncovered 5 minutes — the masala will thicken and coat the beans. Add garam masala and kasuri methi (crushed in your palm). Add lemon juice. Taste and adjust salt. The final rajma should be rich, thick, and coat the back of a spoon. Garnish with fresh coriander.
5. Pack: Rajma in main compartment. 2 rotis wrapped in foil. Raw sliced onion with lemon juice in side compartment.

- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

1. Cook the chickpeas: Drain soaked chickpeas. Pressure cook with 500ml water, bay leaves, cinnamon, cloves, and 1 tsp salt for 5-6 whistles until completely tender. Reserve cooking liquid — this is gold for the masala. Discard bay leaves, cinnamon, cloves.
2. Deeply caramelize the onion: Heat oil in a heavy kadai over medium-high heat. Add cumin seeds — crackle 20 seconds. Add finely chopped onion and cook 10-12 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until the onion is deep mahogany brown and reduced to a third of its original volume. This is the foundation — no shortcut replaces this step. Add ginger-garlic paste and cook 3 minutes.
3. Build the masala: Add blended tomato to the caramelised onion. Cook on medium-high heat 8-10 minutes until completely dried out and dark — the oil will separate and pool around the masala. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, coriander powder. Cook 2 minutes. The masala should be very dark red and thick.
4. Combine and finish: Add cooked chickpeas with 100ml of their cooking liquid. Stir well. Simmer 5 minutes. Add amchur, garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and lemon juice. Stir. The chana should be coated in a thick, dark masala — each chickpea visible but cloaked. Taste: bold, slightly tangy from amchur, with depth from the caramelised onion. Garnish with fresh coriander.
5. Pack: Chana in main compartment. Brown rice in second compartment. Raw sliced onion dressed with lemon and salt on the side.

- Salt — 2 g
- Ghee — 5 g
- Black Pepper — 1 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Mint — 5 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

- 1. Roast the makhana: Heat a kadai over medium heat. Add ghee and let it melt. Add makhana and toss continuously for 5-6 minutes until they are crispy and light — a makhana is ready when you can break one cleanly between your fingers with a distinct snap. They should feel hollow and light. Add cumin seeds to the pan halfway through — they toast in the residual ghee. Remove from heat. Immediately toss with black pepper, amchur, red chilli powder, and salt while hot.
- 2. Make quick tamarind chutney: Combine tamarind extract with jaggery and 2 tbsp water in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce 2 minutes until slightly thickened. Add a pinch of red chilli powder. Cool. The chutney should be tangy-sweet.
- 3. Assemble and pack: Place roasted makhana in a snack box. Top with pomegranate arils and torn mint. Pack tamarind chutney in a 15ml pot on the side — never pre-dress makhana or they go soft immediately. Garnish with fresh coriander.

BREAKFASTAndhra-Style Pesarattu with Ginger Chutney & Moong Sprout Salad*345 kcal*23g protein*45g carbs*7g fat*11g fibre*INGREDIENTS

- Moong Dal (cooked) — 90 g
- Green Chilli — 8 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Ginger — 15 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 4 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 50 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Ginger — 12 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Tamarind — 10 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 3 g
- Moong Dal (cooked) — 40 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 30 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Grind the pesarattu batter: Drain soaked green moong thoroughly. Transfer to blender with ginger, green chilli, cumin seeds, salt, and approximately 80ml water. Blend to a smooth, flowing batter — slightly coarser than dosa batter is fine and actually preferred. The green colour from the moong skin is correct. Batter should flow easily from the ladle. Adjust water if needed — one tablespoon at a time.
2. Make the ginger-tamarind chutney: In a small pan, heat 4g groundnut oil over medium heat. Add sliced ginger and fry 2 minutes until it begins to colour at the edges. Add tamarind extract, red chilli powder, and salt. Cook 3 minutes until thick and fragrant. Remove from heat. In the same pan (wipe clean), heat remaining oil and add mustard seeds — wait until they pop, then add curry leaves and let them crisp 15 seconds. Pour this tadka over the chutney. The final chutney should be sharp, hot, and deeply gingery.
3. Cook the pesarattu: Heat cast iron tawa to high heat. Brush with 2g oil. Pour one ladle of batter (approximately 90g) and immediately spread outward in a fast, confident spiral using the back of the ladle. Lower heat to medium. Cook 2.5-3 minutes until edges are crisp and surface looks dry and matte — the green colour will deepen to dark olive. No flip needed for pesarattu — it is traditionally cooked one side only. Fold into a half-moon and remove.
4. Assemble the sprout salad: Toss moong sprouts, diced tomato, and finely diced onion with lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Fold in fresh coriander. The salad should be lightly dressed — not soaking. It provides volume, crunch, and additional protein.
5. Final pack: Place 2 pesarattu folded in compartment. Sprout salad in side compartment. Chutney pot sealed separately. Label: "Best within 20 min. Dip in chutney and eat with sprout salad."

- Matki — 90 g

- Sesame Seeds — 10 g
- Coriander Powder — 4 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Pomegranate Arils — 20 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 100 g

- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Roti / Chapati (plain) — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

- 1. Make the kanda lasun masala paste: In a dry pan, roast peanuts and sesame seeds separately until golden. Cool. Blend together with garlic, ginger, red chilli powder, and 3 tbsp water to a coarse paste. This is the kanda lasun (onion-garlic) masala base that gives Maharashtrian usal its unmistakable flavour. The paste should be aromatic and sharp with garlic.
- 2. Pressure cook the sprouts: Pressure cook the matki sprouts with 200ml water and a pinch of salt for 1 whistle only — the sprouts should be cooked through but still hold their shape with slight bite. Over-cooking makes them mushy. Allow natural pressure release.
- 3. Build the usal: Heat oil in kadai. Add mustard seeds and cumin seeds — wait for the pop. Add curry leaves. Add finely chopped onion and cook 6 minutes until golden. Add kanda lasun masala paste and cook 3 minutes, stirring continuously, until the paste darkens and the oil separates. Add chopped tomato, coriander powder, turmeric, and garam masala. Cook 4 minutes until the masala is dark and thick.
- 4. Combine and finish: Add pressure-cooked sprouts and 100ml water. Stir well. Simmer 5 minutes until the masala coats each sprout. The usal should be thick — not soupy. Add lemon juice, taste and adjust salt. The final usal must be bold: spicy, tangy, and garlicky. Garnish with fresh coriander and pomegranate arils.
- 5. Pack: Usal in main compartment. Whole wheat pav wrapped in foil. Green coriander chutney in 20ml pot. A wedge of lemon on the side.

- Cloves — 1 g
- Bay Leaves — 1 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the khichdi: In a pressure cooker, combine rice, toor dal, moong dal, masoor dal, chopped onion, tomato, ginger, green chilli, turmeric, cloves, cinnamon, bay leaf, salt, and 500ml water. Stir well. Pressure cook on high for 3 whistles. Allow natural pressure release 10 minutes. Open — the khichdi should be a thick, porridge-like consistency with no individual grain or dal visible. Stir vigorously to create a smooth, lump-free texture.
2. The essential ghee-cumin tadka: Heat ghee in a small tadka pan over high heat until shimmering and lightly smoking. Add cumin seeds — they should crackle immediately and darkly. Add hing (sizzles). Remove from heat and pour immediately over the khichdi. Do not stir in — let the sizzling ghee pool on top. The customer sees it, smells it, and then stirs it themselves.
3. Make kachumber and pack: Toss diced tomato, cucumber, and fresh coriander with lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Portion khichdi with ghee tadka on top into the main compartment. Kachumber in a sealed side compartment.

- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 40 g

METHOD

1. Blend the sprouted moong batter: Blend sprouted moong with curd, grated ginger, green chilli, turmeric, salt, and minimal water (the sprouts are already moist) to a smooth batter the consistency of thick buttermilk. It should pour slowly. Rest 5 minutes.
2. Steam the dhokla: Grease a shallow steaming tray. Pour batter to 2cm depth. Steam on high heat for 12-14 minutes until a toothpick inserted in the centre comes out clean. Do not open the steamer before 12 minutes — temperature drop causes the dhokla to deflate.
3. Temper and cut: Heat oil in a small tadka pan. Add mustard seeds, wait for the pop. Add curry leaves and sesame seeds — 10 seconds. Pour over the steamed dhokla while it is still in the tray. Cut into bite-sized squares (4×4cm).
4. Make chutney and pack: Blend coriander, mint, lemon juice, green chilli, and a pinch of salt with minimal water to a bright green chutney. Pack 6-8 dhokla bites in snack box. Chutney in 20ml pot on the side.

Rajasthani Dalia Khichdi with Methi Tadka & Lemon

362 kcal

18g protein

53g carbs

9g fat

9g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Dalia — 70 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 50 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Cumin Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 4 g
- Lemon Juice — 15 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Moong Dal (cooked) — 40 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Mustard Oil — 8 g
- Fenugreek Seeds — 2 g
- Methi Leaves — 30 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

1. Dry roast the dalia: In a dry pressure cooker or heavy pot, roast the dalia over medium heat for 2 minutes, stirring continuously, until it smells nutty and a few grains begin to colour. This step is non-negotiable — it stops the khichdi from going gummy and adds a nutty depth. Remove and set aside.
2. Build the base: Heat mustard oil in the pressure cooker until it begins to smoke — remove from heat for 30 seconds, then return to medium heat. This removes the raw pungency of mustard oil. Add cumin seeds and fenugreek seeds and let them sizzle 30 seconds. Add chopped onion and cook 4 minutes until translucent. Add grated ginger and slit green chilli, cook 1 minute. Add tomatoes and cook 3 minutes until soft and the oil begins to show at the edges.
3. Pressure cook: Add roasted dalia, washed moong dal, turmeric, salt, and 600ml water. Stir well. Seal the pressure cooker and cook on high until one whistle, then reduce to low and cook 8 minutes. Turn off heat and allow natural pressure release — approximately 10 minutes. Open to reveal a thick, porridge-like consistency. If too thick, add 50ml hot water and stir.
4. Finish with methi and tadka: Stir in fresh methi leaves into the hot khichdi — they wilt from the heat alone, preserving their nutrients. In a small tadka pan, heat the remaining 2g mustard oil, add curry leaves and let them crisp 10 seconds. Pour over the khichdi. Squeeze fresh lemon juice over the top and stir through.
5. Garnish and pack: Portion into 400g serving bowl. Garnish with fresh coriander. Lemon wedge on the side if not already added. Seal lid tightly — khichdi retains moisture and holds well in transit.

- Tamatar / Tomato — 100 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Groundnut Oil — 12 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 160 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Kashmiri Red Chilli Powder — 5 g
- Fennel Seeds — 4 g

- Peanuts (roasted) — 20 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Turmeric Powder — 2 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 60 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g

METHOD

- 1. Dry roast and grind the xacuti masala: In a dry pan over medium heat, roast together: fennel seeds, cloves, cinnamon, cardamom, peanuts, sesame seeds, and half the onion (roughly chopped). Stir continuously for 5-6 minutes until the onion is slightly charred and the spices are fragrant. Cool. Blend with garlic, ginger, kashmiri red chilli powder, coriander powder, and 4 tbsp water to a smooth, thick paste. This is the xacuti masala.
- 2. Press and sear the tofu: Press tofu between two plates with weight for 30 minutes to remove moisture. Cut into 3cm cubes. Season with a pinch of turmeric and salt. Heat 8g oil in a cast iron pan over high heat until shimmering. Add tofu cubes in a single layer. Sear 2 minutes per side until golden-brown and slightly crispy on the outside. The sear creates a crust that prevents the tofu from going mushy in the gravy.
- 3. Build the gravy: Heat 4g oil in a heavy pot. Add sliced remaining onion and cook 5 minutes until golden. Add tomatoes and cook 4 minutes. Add the xacuti masala paste and cook 4-5 minutes, stirring constantly, until darkened and oil separates. Add 200ml water, bring to simmer.
- 4. Braise tofu and finish: Add seared tofu to the simmering gravy. Spoon gravy over each piece. Simmer on low heat 8 minutes — the tofu will absorb the xacuti flavours. Add lemon juice, adjust salt. Garnish with fresh coriander. Pack brown rice in one compartment, xacuti in main compartment, kachumber (diced tomato + cucumber + lemon + coriander) in a side compartment.

- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Curry Leaves — 6 g
- Tamarind — 8 g
- Idli (steamed) — 80 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Cook the kadala: Pressure cook soaked black chickpeas with 400ml water and a pinch of salt for 6-7 whistles — black chickpeas are denser than white and need more cooking time. They should be completely tender: press one between fingers and it should yield with zero resistance. Reserve the dark cooking liquid — it adds colour and depth to the curry.
2. Make the Malabar masala paste: Dry roast peanuts and sesame seeds until golden. Cool. Grind with garlic, ginger, fennel seeds, coriander powder, red chilli powder, turmeric, tamarind extract, and 4 tbsp water to a smooth paste. This is the heart of the Malabar masala — the peanut-sesame-tamarind combination creates the characteristic thick, slightly nutty, sour-spiced base of Malabar coastal cooking.
3. Build the curry: Heat oil in kadai. Add mustard seeds — pop. Add curry leaves (generous amount — let them crackle fully). Add sliced onion and cook 6 minutes golden. Add the masala paste and cook 4 minutes until darkened. Add chopped tomato and cook 4 minutes until oil separates. Add cooked kadala with 150ml of their dark cooking liquid. Stir well. Simmer 8 minutes. Add garam masala and lemon juice. The curry should be thick, dark, and coat the chickpeas.
4. Make cucumber raita and pack: Grate cucumber, squeeze water, fold into whisked low-fat curd with a pinch of salt and cumin. Pack kadala curry in main compartment. Appam or idlis wrapped warm. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish curry with fresh coriander.

- 2. Toss the chaat: In a bowl, combine cooked kala chana, diced onion, diced tomato (deseeded to prevent excess moisture), green chilli, grated ginger, amchur, roasted cumin powder, red chilli powder, and salt. Toss well. Add lemon juice and toss again. The chaat should be vibrant with every grain coated in the spice mix. Taste — if flat, add more amchur and lemon; if too sharp, balance with a pinch of salt.
- 3. Garnish and pack: Transfer to snack box. Garnish with fresh coriander and pomegranate arils on top. Pack a lemon wedge on the side. The chaat should look colourful and inviting — not brown and dull.

BREAKFASTGujarati Oats Handvo with Green Chutney*348 kcal22g protein43g carbs10g fat10g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Oats (dry rolled) — 60 g
- Lauki — 100 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Sesame Seeds — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 15 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g
- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 40 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 3 g
- Curry Leaves — 4 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the handvo batter: Combine coarsely ground oats with curd and 30ml water. Mix and rest 15 minutes — the oats will absorb the curd and soften. After resting, add grated lauki (squeezed), chopped spinach, minced green chilli, grated ginger, turmeric, red chilli powder, and salt. The batter should be thick and drop from a spoon slowly — not pour.
2. Do the tadka: Heat 4g oil in a small tadka pan over high heat. Add mustard seeds — wait for them to splutter loudly (about 30 seconds). Add curry leaves and let them crackle 10 seconds. Add sesame seeds, toss quickly for 5 seconds. Immediately pour HALF this tadka into the batter and mix through. Reserve the other half for the top.
3. Cook the handvo: Heat a thick-bottomed non-stick pan over medium heat with 4g oil. Pour in batter and spread to a 2cm thick disc — do not make it too thin or it will dry out. Scatter remaining tadka (with sesame) over the top. Cover with a lid and cook on low-medium heat for 12 minutes. The bottom should be deep golden — lift a corner gently at 10 minutes to check. Flip carefully (use a plate to invert, then slide back into pan) and cook uncovered 5 minutes on the second side.
4. Make green chutney and pack: Blend fresh coriander, green chilli, lemon juice, a pinch of salt, and 2 tbsp water until smooth. Pack 2 handvo wedges in main compartment, chutney in a sealed 30ml pot on the side.

LUNCHAwadhi Dal Makhani Lightened with Brown Rice & Lemon Raita

476 kcal

27g protein

68g carbs

10g fat

16g fibre

- Masoor Dal (cooked) — 60 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 150 g
- Garlic — 15 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 3 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Dahi / Curd (low fat) — 100 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Rajma (cooked) — 30 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Ginger — 10 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Ghee — 8 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Pressure cook the lentils: Drain soaked urad dal and rajma. Add to pressure cooker with 600ml fresh water and a pinch of salt. Cook on high for 8-10 whistles — both urad and rajma must be completely broken down and tender. Natural pressure release. The urad should be releasing starch into the water, making it slightly viscous. Mash lightly with a whisk.
2. Build the tomato base: Heat ghee and oil in a heavy pot. Add finely chopped onion and cook 8 minutes until deeply golden. Add ginger-garlic paste and cook 3 minutes. Add blended tomato puree and cook 8-10 minutes on medium-high heat until the oil separates and the tomato is dark red. Add red chilli powder, coriander powder, and turmeric. Cook 2 more minutes.
3. Combine and simmer: Add pressure-cooked lentils to the tomato base. Stir well — the dal will look lighter at first but will deepen as it simmers. Add 100ml water if needed for consistency. Simmer uncovered on low heat 15 minutes, stirring every 3 minutes, until the dal is very thick and the masala is fully integrated. The dal should coat the back of a spoon thickly. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, and a finishing drizzle of 4g ghee. Do not stir the ghee in — let it pool on top.
4. Make raita and pack: Whisk curd smooth. Mix in grated cucumber, lemon juice, roasted crushed cumin, and a pinch of salt. Pack dal in main compartment with ghee on top. Brown rice in side compartment. Raita in sealed 60ml pot. Garnish with fresh coriander.

DINNERNorth Indian Palak Paneer with Jowar Roti*412 kcal28g protein43g carbs14g fat11g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Paneer Low Fat — 150 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 5 g
- Jowar Flour — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Palak (spinach, cooked) — 250 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 80 g
- Ginger — 8 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Ghee — 6 g
- Lemon Juice — 8 g
- Fresh Coriander — 5 g

METHOD

1. Blanch and puree the spinach: Bring a large pot of salted water to a vigorous boil. Drop spinach leaves in — blanch exactly 30 seconds, no more. Drain immediately and transfer to an ice bath (or run cold water) to stop the cooking and preserve the bright green colour. Blend the blanched spinach to a very smooth puree. This step is the difference between a vibrant green palak paneer and a dull army-green one.
2. Sear the paneer: Heat 4g ghee in a cast iron pan over high heat until shimmering. Add paneer cubes in a single layer. Sear 90 seconds per side until golden-brown with slightly crispy edges. The sear prevents the paneer from breaking down in the curry. Remove and set aside.
3. Build the masala: In the same pan, add oil and reduce heat to medium. Add cumin seeds, let them crackle. Add finely chopped onion and cook 6 minutes until golden. Add garlic, ginger, and green chilli paste — cook 2 minutes. Add blended tomato, turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Cook 5 minutes until oil separates.
4. Combine and finish: Add spinach puree to the masala. Stir well on medium heat 3 minutes. Add seared paneer cubes. Simmer 3 minutes. Add garam masala and crushed kasuri methi. Add lemon juice to preserve the green colour. Finish with a swirl of 2g ghee. The palak should be vibrant green, not dull.
5. Make jowar roti and pack: Knead jowar flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into a 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 2 min per side. Pack palak paneer in main compartment. Jowar roti wrapped in foil.

SNACKPunjabi Hung Curd with Flaxseeds & Cucumber Sticks*158 kcal15g protein11g carbs6g fat5g fibreINGREDIENTS

- Hung Curd — 100 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Amchur Powder — 1 g
- Gajar / Carrot — 50 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Flaxseeds — 8 g
- Black Pepper — 1 g
- Cucumber — 100 g
- Fresh Mint — 3 g

METHOD

1. Prepare the hung curd: Whip hung curd with roasted ground cumin, black pepper, amchur, and salt until completely smooth and airy. Taste — it should be thick, tangy, and well-seasoned. If too thick, add 1 tsp water and whisk again. The consistency should be dip-like — thick enough to coat a vegetable stick without dripping off.
2. Roast flaxseeds: Dry roast flaxseeds in a small pan over medium heat 2-3 minutes until they begin to pop and emit a nutty aroma. Cool. Sprinkle over the hung curd.
3. Pack: Spoon hung curd into the dip compartment of the snack box. Cucumber sticks and carrot sticks in the vegetable compartment. Flaxseeds on top of curd. Garnish with fresh mint leaf.

BREAKFAST

Bengali Cholar Dal Cheela with Kasundi Mustard Dip

358 kcal

22g protein

46g carbs

8g fat

11g fibre

- Chole / Chickpeas (cooked) — 80 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Cumin Seeds — 2 g
- Mustard Oil — 8 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g
- Ginger — 10 g
- Cardamom — 1 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Mustard Seeds — 10 g
- Lemon Juice — 12 g
- Cucumber — 80 g
- Salt — 2 g

METHOD

1. Grind the batter: Drain soaked chana dal and blend with grated ginger, green chilli, cardamom seeds, cumin seeds, turmeric, salt, and 70ml water to a smooth batter. It should be slightly thicker than moong dal batter — chana dal is denser. The batter will be pale yellow with tiny black cardamom specks. Rest 5 minutes before use.
2. Make the kasundi-style mustard dip: Grind mustard seeds with 2 tbsp water, green chilli, lemon juice, turmeric, and a pinch of salt to a coarse, pungent paste. Do not over-blend — some texture is correct for kasundi. Taste: it should be aggressively mustardy, sharp, and spicy. Adjust lemon for brightness. Transfer to a 30ml pot.
3. Cook the cheelas: Heat cast iron tawa to high, brush with 2g mustard oil (the Bengali flavour is incomplete without mustard oil). Pour one ladle of batter, spread to 6-inch circle. Reduce to medium heat. Cook 2.5 minutes until edges lift and surface is matte. Drizzle 1g oil around the edges. Flip and cook 60 seconds. Cheela should be evenly golden with some brown spots — not pale.
4. Pack and serve: Place 4 cheelas folded in the box. Julienned cucumber in side compartment with a squeeze of lemon and pinch of salt. Kasundi pot sealed. Include note: "Dip cheela in kasundi, eat with cucumber strips."

LUNCHContinental Indian Paneer Bhurji with Brown Rice & Capsicum Salad

462 kcal

32g protein

49g carbs

15g fat

8g fibre

INGREDIENTS

- Paneer (full fat) — 180 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 100 g
- Garlic — 8 g
- Green Chilli — 5 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 2 g
- Garam Masala — 1 g
- Black Pepper — 2 g
- Salt — 3 g
- Brown Rice Cooked — 150 g
- Cucumber — 60 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Capsicum — 60 g
- Ginger — 5 g
- Turmeric Powder — 1 g
- Coriander Powder — 3 g
- Kasuri Methi — 3 g
- Groundnut Oil — 8 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Capsicum — 50 g
- Fresh Coriander — 8 g

METHOD

- 1. Sauté the aromatics: Heat oil in a kadai over medium-high heat. Add finely diced onion and cook 4 minutes until soft and beginning to colour. Add minced garlic, grated ginger, and green chilli — cook 2 minutes. Add diced capsicum and toss 2 minutes until slightly softened but still with crunch. Add diced tomato and cook 3 minutes until soft and most moisture is gone. The base should be dry — paneer bhurji with a wet base goes soggy and watery.
- 2. Add spices and bloom: Reduce heat to medium. Add turmeric, red chilli powder, and coriander powder. Stir continuously for 60 seconds until the spices are fragrant and darken slightly. The spices must be bloomed in the oil — adding them after the paneer produces a raw, gritty spice flavour.
- 3. Add paneer and scramble: Add crumbled paneer to the masala base. Fold gently using a spatula — do not stir aggressively or the paneer becomes paste. Cook on medium heat 3 minutes, folding every minute, until the paneer is coated in the masala and heated through. Add garam masala, crushed kasuri methi, freshly cracked black pepper, and lemon juice. Fold once more. The bhurji should look like golden scrambled eggs with red and green flecks. Taste — bold, slightly tangy, peppery.
- 4. Pack with brown rice and salad: Pack paneer bhurji in main compartment. Brown rice in second compartment. Julienned raw capsicum and sliced cucumber tossed with lemon juice and a pinch of salt in side compartment. Garnish bhurji with fresh coriander.

- Eggplant — 240 g
- Garlic — 12 g
- Sesame Seeds — 10 g
- Coriander Powder — 4 g
- Garam Masala — 2 g
- Groundnut Oil — 10 g
- Curry Leaves — 5 g
- Lemon Juice — 10 g
- Tamatar / Tomato — 60 g
- Salt — 2 g
- Pyaaz / Onion — 80 g
- Peanuts (roasted) — 30 g
- Red Chilli Powder — 4 g

- Amchur Powder — 2 g
- Mustard Seeds — 2 g
- Fresh Coriander — 10 g
- Bajra Flour — 70 g
- Cucumber — 50 g
- Jaggery — 5 g

METHOD

- 1. Make the kanda lasun stuffing: In a bowl, combine: roasted crushed peanuts, roasted sesame seeds, finely chopped onion (raw), minced garlic, red chilli powder, coriander powder, turmeric, garam masala, amchur, jaggery, salt, fresh coriander, and lemon juice. Mix thoroughly — the mixture should be moist enough to pack into the brinjal but not wet. Taste — it should be intensely flavoured: spicy, garlicky, tangy, and slightly sweet from the jaggery.
- 2. Stuff the brinjals: Hold each slit brinjal open gently and pack stuffing into the cavity — use a small spoon to push it deep inside. Pack firmly. The brinjal should look slightly puffed. Seal by pressing the slit closed.
- 3. Cook the bharli vangi: Heat oil in a heavy pot over medium heat. Add mustard seeds and curry leaves — let them pop. Carefully place stuffed brinjals in a single layer. Sear 2 minutes turning gently. Reduce heat to low. Cover with a tight-fitting lid. Cook on low heat 18-20 minutes, turning the brinjals every 5 minutes. The brinjals are ready when completely tender when pierced with a knife and the filling is caramelised. No water is added — they steam in their own juices.
- 4. Make bhakri and pack: Knead bajra flour with hot water into a soft dough. Pat into thick 5-inch circle. Cook on tawa 3 min per side — bajra bhakri takes longer than jowar. Pack 3 stuffed brinjals in main compartment. Bhakri wrapped in foil. Kachumber (diced tomato, cucumber, lemon, coriander) in side compartment.
